INTRODUCTION.

THE compilation of this work has been attended with a great deal of labor and expense. Every effort has been made to procure full and accurate information from all parts of the State, and the Publisher takes pleasure in presenting the result of those efforts, for the patronage of a generous public, indulging the hope that they will overlook imperfections and give him full credit for the large amount of valuable information hereby afforded.

Many difficulties have been encountered in the compilation of this book on account of the large extent of territory embraced. It is believed, however, that an impartial examination will satisfy any one as to its general correctness and utility. How far the Publisher has succeeded in the design of producing a useful book, it will be for the public to decide.

The typography, press-work and binding, were executed by Messrs. Bingham & Doughty, whose facilities, in both departments, are equal to any other establishment in the West.

To the Editors and Publishers of Newspapers throughout the State, Post Masters, and those who deem a work of this character one of value and benefit, and who have liberally aided it by their advertisements and subscriptions, the Publisher takes this means of returning his thanks, trusting that the few who have refrained will be convinced of the utility of the present volume.

Believing the book to be as perfect as the first issue of a work of this character is ever found, and with the assurance that the succeeding one shall be more accurate in all its details, it is now presented as a candidate for public favor, with the hope that it may merit and receive the approbation of the people herein represented.

Respectfully,

GEO. W. HAWES.

BLOOMINGTON,

A flourishing post town and the county seat of Monroe county, is pleasantly situated on the line of the New Albany and Salem Railroad. The town was laid out the 12th day of June, 1818, by Benjamin Park, agent, who was appointed by the County Commissioners. James Boland made an addition to the north on November 7th, 1820. This place has been rapidly improving. The public buildings are fine and substantial, and the public square highly ornamented with shade-trees and shrubbery. This town is the seat of the State University, which was founded in 1835. The first president was Andrew Wylie, who held the presidency until his death in 1851. Wm. M. Daily, a graduate of the University in 1836, was elected to succeed Mr. Wylie, and took the chair in 1853. There are also two flourishing literary societies connected with the University. The new University is a plain, substantial building, in the gothic style, three stories high, 145 feet long by 53 feet wide, gabled and surmounted by a bell-tower about 80 feet high. The chapel is 66 by 50 feet. Society rooms, committee rooms and professor's rooms, main hall, and passage of communication to the wings are in the center building. The wings are each 38 by 26 feet, three stories high, but lower than the main building, with intermediate spaces or side halls, in which are stair-ways leading to the chapel on either side, the library, museum, recitation-room, law lecture room, law library, president's rooms, &c.

The apparatus for chemical and philosophical illustrations is respectable. The mineralogical cabinet contains many valuable and interesting specimens. An addition of 800 volumes, worth fifteen hundred dollars, has been made to the University library by a munificent donation from H. W. Derby, Esq., of Cincinnati, O. An alcove is being fitted up in the new library room for their reception, where they will remain as monuments of the liberality of the donor, who has the warmest feelings of gratitude of every friend of the University. Bloomington has two good female seminaries, both under the best of management. A number of good public schools all well attended; eight churches—two Presbyterian, one Methodist, one Christian, one Baptist, one Associate Reform, one Seceder, and one Covenantant—one flouring-mill, three saw-mills in the vicinity, one foundry, one plow factory, one carriage factory, one wagon shop, one machine shop, two tanneries, one cooper shop, two saddle and harness shops, one stove and tin shop, one hardware, seven groceries, three drug-stores, ten dry goods stores, five boot and shoe shops, three blacksmith shops, and the usual number of carpenters, masons, &c., fourteen attorneys, and eight physicians. Distant 90 miles north of New Albany. 50 miles from Indianapolis. Population 3,000.

CORYDON,

A post town and the county seat of Harrison county, is pleasantly situated at the junction of Little and Big Indian creeks, surrounded by hills; has good limestone, excellent water, and consequently healthy. The surface of the surrounding country is hilly and the soil well adapted to wheat. Corydon has for years past been celebrated for its educational advantages, for the moral tone of its inhabitants, and for its romantic scenery. This town was formerly the seat of government, which was removed to Indianapolis in 1824, after which, for a time, the prosperity of the town declined. The court house, built of stone, and which is still in good repair, is the house in which the first constitution of the State of Indiana was formed. A great improvement has taken place within a few years in its business, and, although not a manufacturing town,

 still large quantities of flour, lumber,
 wagon-hubbs, leather, &c., are annually sent to New Albany and Louisville, the nearest markets. It has two bakers, two large wagon and blacksmith shops, two booksellers, two drug stores, one shoe store, four carpenters, three cabinet makers, two ministers, four general stores, one dress maker, two newspapers, the Harrison Democrat and Western Argus, two steam grist and flouring mills, one saw mill, two harness makers, one grocer, one hide and leather store, two hotels, eight lawyers, two magistrates, one marble yard, five physicians and surgeons, one stove dealer and tinsmith, one cooper, one painter, one tannery, two clothiers, one hubb factory, one carding machine, five churches, one high school, one select school and a primary school. Distant 8 miles from the celebrated Wyandotte Cave, 20 miles west of New Albany, and 115
 miles south of Indianapolis. Population,
 1,200.

CRAWFORDSVILLE,

A post town and the seat of justice of Montgomery county, on the east side of Rock River, on the New Albany and Salem Railroad, and was laid out in 1823 by Ambrose Whitlock and Williamson Dunn.

Since then there have been twenty or more additions made by different persons. The location of this place is very desirable, being healthy and having a very active trade, and improving rapidly in size and business, bidding fair to become one of the most important commercial towns in the State. It is surrounded by a rich agricultural district, inhabited by an industrious and prosperous people. This place is the seat of a very good college, called the "Wabash College," which was chartered in January, 1834. The first president was Rev. Elihu W. Baldwin, of the city of New York, who entered upon his duties in the fall of 1835, and remained president until his death in October, 1840. The first college building erected was 106 feet long, 48 feet wide, four stories high, and was destroyed by fire September 23, 1838, together with the philosophical apparatus, the College and Society's libraries of about 3,000 volumes.

The loss estimated as follows: viz: Loss on the building, $10,000; College library, $3,500; Society libraries, $1,000; philosophical apparatus, $500, making a total of $15,000. Arrangements were made for the immediate rebuilding and repairing of the loss, which was accomplished in the fall of 1839. In April, 1841, Rev. Charles White, D. D., the present incumbent, was elected to the presidency of the College, and took the chair in the fall of that year. In 1854 the trustees completed, at a cost of $3,500, a normal school building, 50 feet long by 36 feet wide, two stories high, to accommodate the preparatory department of the College, and to afford better facilities for the education of common school teachers, by the prosecution of the English sciences, mathematics, algebra, &c. This department embracing a course of three years. In 1857 a central building, 70 feet long by 50 feet wide, was completed. The first floor, divided into four rooms of equal size, designed as recitation rooms. On second floor, three recitation rooms and one large room as a philosophical lecture room, with an appropriate room adjoining. The third floor, is devoted exclusively to the two society halls, each 48 feet by 26 feet, and handsomely furnished.

It is in contemplation to add two wings to the central building, 50 by 34 feet, two stories high. Cost of the central building $17,000; estimated cost of wings $4,000 each. The college library contains over 4,000 volumes of choice and valuable books. The libraries of the literary societies comprise more than 3,000 volumes of well selected books. This institution is furnished with a philosophical and chemical apparatus, a mineralogical cabinet, affording the necessary aid for illustrations in the scientific departments. The following are the present officers:

President—Rev. CHARLES WHITE, D. D.,
Secretary and Librarian—JOHN L. CAMP-
MELL, Esq.

Treasurer—EDMOND O. HOVEY, Esq.

Auditor—ATLAS M. HADLEY, Esq.

Examining Committee—Revs. Thos. S. Milligan, Francis S. McCabe, John Fairchild, P. S. Fairchild, and H. A. Rosetter.

The public square is handsomely situated near the centre of the town, and is beautifully ornamented with fine shade trees. The court-house is a fine structure, built at an expense of $11,000. It contains eight churches, viz: one Episcopal, two Presbyterian, one Methodist Episcopal, two Baptist, one Christian or Campbellite, and one African; one flouring mill, two saw mills, one tannery, two carriage factories, three wagon factories, four cooperages, one stove foundry, three livery stables, three hotels, two newspapers, the "Crawfordsville Review" and the "Crawfordsville Journal;" one good school building which cost $9,000, one hat and cap store, seven groceries, twelve dry goods stores, four jewelry stores, six boot and shoe stores, three cabinet shops, five saddle and harness shops, three drug stores, three bakeries, one cigar store, one store and tin dealer, one hardware store, seven ministers, eleven lawyers, twelve doctors, with the usual supply of mechanics. Distant 169 miles from New Albany, 28 miles from Lafayette, 45 miles northwest of Indianapolis. Population 3,000.

DELPHI,

The seat of Justice of Carroll county, was laid out in 1828; soon after which the first county officers were elected. The town is situated on a fine mill stream called Deer creek, about 1 mile above its mouth. It is about 1 mile from the Wabash river, on the Wabash and Erie Canal, and on the Toledo, Wabash and Western R. R. This road connects Toledo, on Lake Erie, with St. Louis on the Mississippi. At this time Delphi is thought to contain about 2,500 inhabitants. It is a point of great commercial activity; as to grade is about the fourth in the pork trade in the State. The banking house of Messrs. Spears, Case & Co. does a heavy business, although not a bank of issue. The two paper mills located here are doing a fine business—Messrs. Rinehart & Bowen and Robertson & Wood—also, the flouring mills of Bolles & Garrett and D. D. Duke. A handsome court house is now being erected, which will be equal, in point of architectural beauty, with any similar building in the State. The produce business is principally carried on by Messrs. Spears, Case & Co., Abner H. Bowen, Wm. Bolles and Joel H. Dewey. Two newspapers are printed here—the "Weekly Times," M. R. Graham, editor, and "Delphia Weekly Journal," Jas. B. Scott, editor. Distant from Toledo, 186 miles, 65 miles from Indianapolis, 18 miles from Lafayette, and 22 miles from Logansport.

ETNA GREEN,

A post village of Etna township, Kosciusko county, situate on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad, 11 miles west of Warsaw, the county seat, 120 miles north of Indianapolis—a small but thriving town, and is surrounded by a good farming country, the land being of the first quality. The inhabitants of the town are supplied with pure fountain water of the most salutary nature. It was laid out in 1854 by David Carr, and since his death, which took place during the summer of 1856, and until quite recently, matters had assumed rather an embarrassing aspect, all of which is now removed, and the town bids fair, in coming time to be one of the first towns in the county. It contains one blacksmith, one shoe shop, four carpenters, one general store, one hotel, three lumber dealers, two physicians, three saw mills. Population, 100.

EUGENE,

A post office of Vermillion county.

EVANSVILLE,

A post city and the seat of justice of Vanderburgh county, and the principal commercial city of Indiana, is situated on the Ohio river, in the south-western corner of the State. The city is located on an elevated plain, or second bottom, with an elevation of fifty feet, at Water street, above the Ohio at low water; thus being entirely above the highest floods. A range of limestone hills touches the Ohio river immediately below the city, and, receding in a north and east direction, overlooks the plain below, and affords a fine view of Evansville, the Ohio, and the blue hills of Kentucky, far up Green river. When the intervening forests shall be cleared away, when these hills shall be beautified by cultivation, and when neat and tasteful mansions shall stud the elevated foreground, this range will form a striking contrast to the city, and will be admired as one of the most beautiful landscapes on "La Belle Riviere."

In 1817 Evansville was laid off into lots by Gen. Robert M. Evans, James W. Jones and Hugh McGeary, and was named in honor of Gen. Evans. In 1819 it became an incorporated town, and from that time until 1828 but very little progress was made, the town struggling for a mere existence. At that time it was made a landing point for returning boatmen of Wabash and White rivers from their Southern trips. From this time there was some progress.

In 1834 a branch of the State Bank was established here. In 1835-6, on the passage of the State Internal Improvement Bill, it was made the Southern terminus of the Central and the Wabash and Erie Canals. The Central Canal, passing from Muncietown through Indianapolis, was intended to be united with the Wabash and Erie Canal, passing from Toledo down the Maumee and Wabash valleys, at Pt. Commerce, and together form the Southern Division of this great work, thus making Evansville the outlet of two of the richest valleys of the world. This gave high hopes for the future; the population rapidly increased, and property ran up to extravagant rates. But the "crisis" of 1837-8, which checked these grand systems of internal improvements and paralyzed business, was severely felt in this place. From this time until 1845-6 the population was stationary, if not receding. But about this time a grant of land was obtained for completing the Canal, at first to Terre Haute, and then to Evansville, and from this time its progress has been steady and of a permanent character. In 1847 a city charter was obtained, and in 1850 the population had increased to about 5,000; in 1856 to 11,000; and in 1858 to 14,000.

The geographical and geological location of Evansville is extremely favorable to a large commercial and manufacturing city. Situated about equi-distant from the Falls of the Ohio and the mouth of that river (about two hundred miles each way), it has no near rival to compete with, and no large city to overshadow its growth; but is surrounded by all the elements to support population and create wealth. Coal and iron ore underlay the whole country, and "crop out" in every direction convenient to the city. In the suburbs a large shaft has been sunk three hundred feet below the surface, passing through two large veins of coal of excellent quality, from which an inexhaustible supply can be obtained. At Adria, on Green river, sixty miles from the city, is established one of the largest iron works in Kentucky. Near Bloomfield, on the Wabash and Erie Canal, is "Richland Furnace," the largest iron works in Indiana, and surrounded by the largest deposits of iron ore in the State. The slackwater navigation of Green river and the Wabash and Erie Canal afford cheap and certain transportation of these materials of wealth to the manufactories of Evansville. Coal is found all along the Ohio river, from Cannellton to Tradewater, and all along up the Canal to Worthington. This abundance of iron and coal, and so conveniently situated to the cotton fields of Tennessee and Northern Alabama—being only 150 miles from the mouth of the Tennessee river, and with the water-power of the neighboring streams, and the convenient location for manufactories on the Canal, must inevitably make Evansville a large manufacturing city.

The advantages of location in a commercial aspect are equally favorable. Green river flows through one of the finest regions in Kentucky, and falls into the Ohio nine miles above the city. It is navigable for about one hundred and fifty miles during the entire year, and from four to six regular steam packets ply between this city and the various points on that river. During half of the year the Wabash river is navigable, and from this rich valley immense quantities of produce are brought to Evansville for transshipment to New Orleans and Europe. The Wabash and Erie Canal has its Southern terminus at this place, and unites the Ohio river to the Northern Lakes at Toledo, a distance of 462 miles. This Canal brings a very large and increasing commerce to this city, and opens an outlet to the North for Southern products, and to the South for Northern manufactures. The Evansville and Crawfordsville Railroad is completed to Terre Haute, intersecting the Ohio and Mississippi, the Terre Haute and Alton, and the Terre Haute and Richmond Railroads, and is being extended to connect with the Wabash Valley Road. The Evansville, Indianapolis and Cleveland Straight Line Railroad is projected to Indianapolis. When the Henderson and Nashville Railroad is completed to Henderson (ten miles below Evansville on the Ohio), it will give it a very advantageous railroad connection with the South.

The report of the Board for 1857 shows the value of the exports passing through the hands of the Evansville merchants alone, to $7,000,000. Among the exports of particular articles are dry goods, $575,000; flour, $500,000; pork and lard, $1,920,000; tobacco, $1,540,000. The merchandize sales foot up over four millions of dollars, of which more than two millions are grocery sales; the wholesale grocery business amounts to about one and three quarter millions. The dry goods sales are $845,000; clothing, $200,000; boots and shoes, $156,000; lumber, $170,000. The manufacturing is fast gaining on the commercial interests of the city. There are several large flour mills, the value of whose manufactures for 1857 was $487,000; the foundaries, another large branch of manufactures, produced $440,000; cabinet ware $36,000; and the total of manufacturers being $1,631,000. Among the new factories just erected, are a paper mill, steam cooper shop, starch factory, and steam furniture factory. During the year 1857, out of 2,738 steamboats which passed up or down the river, 2,669 had business with Evansville. There are three public banks in this city, the Bank of the State of Indiana, succeeding the old State Bank, the Crescent City and the Canal Banks. These banks have always occupied an enviable position—always maintaining specie payment—and are now enjoying the full confidence of the business public.

Owing to the commercial importance of this city, the national government has made it a Port of Entry, and permanently appointed a collector of customs; and it is anticipated that an appropriation will soon be made for the erection of a Custom House and Post-office, commensurate with the business of the city. A National Marine Hospital has also been built at a cost of $75,000, and is one of the finest buildings in the State. It occupies a commanding location on the front bank of the Ohio, and attracts the attention of the traveler for miles up and down the river. This point has been favorably recommended by government officers as a suitable location for the Western National Arsenal, and it is ardently expected that the United States will select this place for its location.

The number of church organizations in the city are twenty-two, including almost all the various denominations of christians. Some of their edifices are quite large and attractive, among which are Trinity Church, the German Evangelical, and St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

One of the proudest monuments of the city's prosperity and intelligence, is its admirable system of free public schools. While all the other cities of the State have recently been compelled to disband their city school organizations for want of legal authority to sustain them, this city is fortunately placed beyond the reach of the decisions of the Supreme Court on the unconstitutionality of city schools, by its special charter, which is older than the State Constitution. The number of children registered in the public schools for 1857 was 1,446. The schools are now well graded, and under thorough and efficient teachers. No schools in the West are under better discipline, better organized, or in a more prosperous condition. The high school, which maintains an elevated standard of scholarship, has a large and valuable chemical and philosophical apparatus, entirely new, and a fine and choice cabinet of minerals and shells. Nothing has added more to the growth, good order, and prosperity of Evansville than has her well organized and efficient free schools.

As another evidence of the city's intelligence, there are three public libraries, all yet in their infancy, but constantly increasing, which already contain 5,727 volumes, and by the report of the librarians for the year 1857, show an annual circulation of 21,390. The Evansville Library Association, which is one of the principal places of attraction in the city, is an incorporated company with a nominal capital of $30,000, of which $10,000 has already been subscribed. Its library and reading-rooms are open at all times, and contain all the leading papers in the Union.

Among the public buildings are the Marine Hospital, the Public School buildings, and the Court-house, which is a fine piece of architecture, erected at a cost of $40,000.

There are three daily newspapers published in this city—the Journal, with which is connected a steam press; the Enquirer, and the Volksbote, a German paper.

The principal hotels are the Pavillion, the Washington, and the Sherwood House; besides which there are numerous second class houses.

This city claims a mysterious, undefined antiquity of origin. The precise period of time when the first settlement was made by Europeans on the site now occupied by the city, is unknown. The evidences of the earliest settlement and civilization has been shown, however, by a singular discovery, which was made in excavating Oak street culvert in 1857. There were found the remains of a cabin eighteen feet below the surface, about one hundred feet from the pitch of the present bank of the river. It had evidently been a human habitation, and that of Europeans. In the interior were found the parts of an old-fashioned spinning-wheel undecayed, a wooden mall which, perhaps, had served to split the puncheons in building the cabin; the fire-stick, with its charred end; and up near the roof were found pairs of of European boots, which had been placed in that position apparently on a shelf. These ruins were not fully exhumed, but what has been brought to light suggest numerous interesting questions. Could those ruins have been constructed one, two, or three centuries ago? Who were the builders and inmates? The age of the trees that formerly stood upon the present surface would, doubtless, point to the earliest period of the French immigration into this western wild; and that the builders and occupants were civilized men is substantiated by many indubitable proofs. The facts in the case suggest that, perhaps, the cabin was built in an excavation and covered over, as a French "Cachet," which was sometimes done by the early settlers for concealment from the Indians. The discovery opens up a pleasant field for the curious and lovers of the wonderful.

It has a healthy location, and is surrounded by a very fertile section of country, inhabited by moral, industrious, intelligent, and enterprising farmers, whose stalworth frames and sinewy hands burden the capacious warehouses of the town with the products of their farms.

The place has four stores, a school house and church, and there is a saw and flouring mill and distillery now being erected, is a point of very considerable commercial importance for the size of it, especially is it noted for buying and shipping of produce to distant markets. In the single article of wheat alone there is about thirty-five thousand bushels shipped annually to Cincinnati and other points, which, however, will now be manufactured into flour principally at home. Apples, potatoes, hay, pork, and other articles are shipped in proportion. The population is about 500.

FORT WAYNE,

The county seat of Allen county, is the largest and most flourishing city in north-eastern Indiana. It is pleasantly situated on the south bank of the river, at the junction of the St. Marys and St. Joseph rivers, which form the Maumee, 100 miles above Lake Erie.

It is built upon the site of the ancient Indian town of Ke-ki-on-ga. At a very early day the French established a military post at this place. About 1760 the English built a fort here. In 1794 General Wayne erected the fort, which bore his name, and which was garrisoned until 1816.

Although its first settlement by the French dates back to the time that William Penn founded Philadelphia, yet the present town has been built within the last twenty years. The City of Fort Wayne now contains about 14,000 inhabitants, and is rapidly increasing in wealth and substantial property. Extensive flouring mills, foundaries, and other manufacturing establishments, are in successful operation in, and around the city. Fifteen churches beautify and adorn it. A Female College and Female High School have fine buildings, accomplished teachers, and are well sustained. About thirty thousand dollars have been expended during the past few years by the city in the erection of two school houses, in which and the other public schools about 2,500 scholars are receiving common and classic education. The Wabash and Erie Canal, the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago, and the Toledo and Western Railroads afford ample facilities for its extensive mercantile and produce trade. Few cities in the State have grown as rapidly or given as great promise for the future. Distant 112 miles north-east of Indianapolis. Population 14,000.

GOSHEN.

Goshen, established as the seat of justice of Elkhart county in 1831, is pleasantly situated on the eastern bank of the Elkhart river, near the geographical center of the county. Its present population is about 2,000, with a fair prospect for the future. It contains nine dry goods stores, eight grocery and provision stores, three drug stores, two extensive hardware stores, two boot and shoe stores, a leather store, four clothing stores, two jewelry establishments, two furniture stores, two wagon and carriage manufactories, two machine shops, a brewery, and several other smaller and less important establishments. The hotels are the National, City, and Violet House. The latter is a fine three-story brick building, well arranged and furnished.

The Bank of Goshen, the Syracuse Bank and the Salem Bank are located here, owned by solvent, reliable men, doing a legitimate business, and enjoying fully the confidence of the community.

Two newspapers are published here, and well patronized, to-wit: The Goshen Democrat, by Messrs. Heath and Earle, and the Elkhart County Times, by Messrs. Ellis and Stevens.

The Methodist and Presbyterian churches are comfortable buildings, the former under the pastoral care of Rev. J. B. Demotte, and the latter of Rev. L. H. Vanuys. The Baptists, Rev. L. Davis, pastor, are now erecting a church. The Swedenborgians and Episcopalians have also houses of worship, and the Catholics have one in process of erection. The public hall of Hascall and Ellis, forty-four feet by eighty, is one of the finest in the State. A new school house is just completed and is an ornament to the town.

The court house is old, and by no means ornamental, but the public square is unsurpassed in beauty by any other park or square in the west.

The town is a point of shipment on the Northern Indiana Railroad for a very large amount of grain, flour and lumber. The inhabitants are mostly from New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Distant 110 miles from Chicago, 150 miles from Indianapolis, and about 100 miles from Toledo.

GREENCASTLE,

The seat of justice of Putnam county, was settled in 1823, and is beautifully situated, about a mile south-east of the Walnut Fork of Eel river, a large mill stream. It is not only situated in a very fine agricultural region, but at the crossing of the Terre Haute and Richmond with that of the New Albany and Salem Railroad, giving it a grand outlet to either of the four cardinal points of the compass. It is regularly and handsomely laid out, upon a finely diversified surface, with a population of 3,000 inhabitants. It is equally distant from the following places (it being about 40 miles), to wit: Indianapolis on the east, Terre Haute on the west, Bloomington on the south, and Crawfordsville on the north, commanding the trade of a large agricultural district.

It has a number of fine public buildings, among which are a large and handsome court house, the edifice of the "Indiana Asbury University," two Methodist Episcopal churches, two Presbyterian, one Baptist, one Christian, and a small Catholic. It also has many beautiful residences, and some of the most elegant store-rooms and dry goods establishments (numbering fifteen, grocery stores five, in the Wabash valley. Wealth seems to be equally divided among its inhabitants, none very rich, and few very poor.

Considering all the advantages surrounding it, it is one of the finest location in the western part of Indiana for manufacturing purposes: Its railroad facilities, its nearness to vast coal mines, its immense and inexhaustible beds of the best limestone, the finest timber in the world, and abundance of good spring and well water. The only machinery, however, are two establishments for carding, spinning and weaving woolen fabrics, two printing offices, one steam flouring mill, one planing mill, having connected with it the manufacture of doors, sash, and window blinds, one large manufactory of cabinet ware, one for that of carriages and buggies, and two small plow factories. There is, perhaps, here one of the best locations for a large establishment for the manufacture of agricultural implements generally in the State. It affords rare advantages for the mechanic—good health, good morals, and a tone of public feeling which esteems the position of the mechanic and the farmer as the most honorable stations in life.

Fruit growing has received much attention in this vicinity. The apple, the pear, the peach, and the grape, succeed well here when well attended to—the soil being suitably adapted to their growth.

INDIANA ASBURY UNIVERSITY.

This University is under the patronage of the four conferences of the Methodist Episcopal church in Indiana. In the autumn of 1835, the Indiana Conference, which then embraced the whole state, determined to establish an institution of learning, such as should meet a long felt want. The General Assembly, considering that such an institution, "conducted on the most liberal principles, accessible to all religious denominations, and designed for the benefit of our citizens in general," would be of immense advantage to the state, passed an act, January 10th, 1837, establishing "The Indiana Asbury University, which shall be founded and maintained forever, upon a plan the most suitable, for the benefit of the youth of every class of citizens, and of every religious denomination, who shall be freely admitted to equal advantages and privileges of education, and to all the literary honors of said University, according to their merit."

On the 5th of June, 1837, the Preparatory Department was opened. In May, 1839, the first President, Rev. Matthew Simpson, now one of the Bishops of the M. E. Church, assumed the duties of his office, and the various departments of the College were regularly organized. The first Commencement was held in 1840, in the chapel of the University, which was then just completed. At this time, the faculty consisted of but four instructors. In 1841, the chair of Mathematics and Natural Science was established, the President having previously discharged the duties of this department in addition to his own. In 1843, the department of Ancient Languages was divided, and the professorship of Latin instituted. The department of Natural Science was also detached from that of Mathematics, and organized into a separate professorship. In 1852, the chair of Belles Lettres and History was established, and in 1853, the Law School was opened.

A plan for the permanent endowment of the University, by the sale of perpetual scholarships, at $100 each, was projected and set in operation in 1844. Up to the present time, this plan has realized about $130,000, over one-half of which has been collected and invested, and the rest secured by notes bearing interest. The real estate of the University is valued at $30,000. The annual income from all sources has thus far met the current expenses of the institution.

The course of study is thorough, and substantially the same as that of the best eastern colleges. The degree of Bachelor of Arts is conferred on those who complete the classical course, and that of Bachelor of Science on those who complete the Scientific course, and that of Bachelor of Law on those who complete the studies of the Law School.

A good chemical and philosophical apparatus, and an extensive mineralogical cabinet afford excellent facilities for the study of the sciences. The College and Society Libraries contain about 9,000 volumes, among which are many rare and valuable books, in several languages.

Two flourishing literary societies afford fine facilities for rhetorical culture, and a practical acquaintance with parliamentary rules and usages.

The Alumni of this University number 145, of whom 42 are lawyers, 36 ministers, 12 physicians, and 18 presidents and professors in colleges. 35 have graduated in the law school. The Faculty at present is constituted as follows:

FACULTY.

REV. THOMAS BOWMAN, D. D., President and Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy.

REV. CYRUS NUTT, A. M., Vice President and Professor of Mathematics.

JOSEPH TINGLEY, A. M., Professor of Natural Sciences.

There is, also, at this place a flourishing school call the Asbury Female Institute, under the charge of Professor James A. Dean, a gentleman of acknowledged worth and ability. There are also numerous private and select schools constantly in operation. For educational advantages this is undoubtedly one of the best points in the west.

HUNTINGTON,

The county seat of Huntington county, is situated nearly in the center of the county, and is intersected by the Toledo, Wabash and Western Railroad, and the Wabash and Erie Canal, and Little River washes its southern boundary. It is distant from the city of Fort Wayne on the east 25 miles, and from the town of Wabash, the county seat of Wabash county, on the west, 19 miles. There are no towns of note either north or south of Huntington short of 25 to 33 miles, making it the commercial center of a rich and fertile country, whose radius is nearly 50 miles. Manufacturing is not carried on here to any very considerable extent; there are, however, a steam flour mill and a foundry doing a respectable business. The facilities for manufacturing are abundant, and the location offers an inviting field to the capitalist in almost any department of manufacture. There is abundant water power and numerous springs of excellent water in this place. Its educational advantages are not so good as might be desired, though three or four public and private schools are supported and pretty well attended. There are four church edifices, viz.: one Baptist, one Methodist, one Disciples and one Catholic. The Presbyterian society is about erecting a church building this season. A new court house is now in progress, which, when completed, will compare favorably with such structures in any part of the State. There are two newspaper offices, having weekly issues, three excellent hotels, several stores, manufacturers of boots and shoes, wood and iron, &c. Population, 2,000.

INDIANA FURNACE,

A post office of Vermillion county.

INDIANAPOLIS,

The capital of the State of Indiana, and seat of justice of Marion county, is situated on the west fork of White river. Its site is a beautiful, fertile, and extensive plain, nearly in the center of the county, and very nearly equi-distant from the several boundaries of the State, at the crossing of the National road, and immediately below the mouth of Fall creek, 110 miles north-west of Cincinnati, and 86 miles north-west of Madison. It was first settled in 1819, by John Pogue, and in 1820 was selected as the permanent seat of government. The public offices were removed from Corydon on the first of January, 1825.

Indianapolis was laid out early in 1821, and the first sale of lots took place the same year. It is beautifully laid off, the streets being from sixty to one hundred and twenty feet in width, crossing each other at right angles, except four diagonal streets, which converge to a circular area, and affords easy access to every section of the city. The streets are tastefully embellished with forest and ornamental shade trees. A Shade Tree Association has recently been formed for supplying vacant lots with trees.

With the romance of the early settlement of this city this volume has nothing to do. The hardships of our early pioneers are matters of history. Posterity respects them, and will hold them always in remembrance. It is to present the importance of the city to-day that the space allotted to the subject is designed. Indianapolis has superior facilities for becoming a large manufacturing city. From her geographical position—being in the very center of the State, and accessible from all points of the compass by railroad—the advantages Indianapolis affords for the profitable investment of capital and labor in every department of industry, and will bear favorable comparison with those of any other city in the West. Frugality and industry are prominent characteristics of its inhabitants. Consequently a large amount of conservatism is observable in all their transactions.

The reputation abroad of her merchants and manufacturers for solvency, is the result not only of their industry and their wealth, but of their enterprise and the conservative element in their business transactions, an element which has enabled them to withstand general misfortunes in business with a firmness and ability which few communities can boast of. She has in her manufacturing career built up a foundation of remarkable solidity for the future increase of her commercial and manufacturing operations.

The Central Canal and Fall Creek afford abundant hydraulic power, sufficient for any kind of machinery. Wood is cheap, and the supply plentiful. Inexhaustible beds of coal, quarries of stone, and mines of iron ore, each of the very best quality, are opened within a convenient distance of the city. Coal can be furnished, delivered at from ten to twelve cents per bushel.

The industry of her population is not surpassed by that of any other city; and there are for all the wealth of its population, fewer gentlemen of leisure, than in any city of the Union.

There are at the present time but few if any families in which the male members are not engaged in some occupation from day to day, of either a professional, mercantile or mechanical character. The wealth of the city is generally distributed, a result of the frugality and industry before mentioned, as well as of the opportunities here for the accumulation of money. When it is known that the chartered or incorporated banking capital of the city is only $150,000, it must be apparent to all that to carry on the heavy business transacted in the city in its mercantile and manufacturing departments, there must be not only large amounts of private capital, but a very general distribution of it throughout the business community.

The population of Indianapolis in 1840, 2,692; in 1850, 8,091; in 1853, 12,000; in 1855, 16,000; in 1857, 24,000; and at the present time, 28,900, is estimated by the city assessor. There are many cities whose growth seems to be more rapid than Indianapolis, and probably for a short period has been so, yet viewing its increase for a series of years, it is found there has been in the swell of its population a progress which, from its quietness, has attracted but little attention, and is in its comparative ratio with the growth of other cities, undervalued by even her own citizens.

In manufacturing establishments the city contains one rolling mill, for the manufacture and renewal of railroad iron, built at a cost (including machinery) of $125,000. It has the capacity of turning out fourteen thousand tons of new iron annually, and of consuming about the same amount of coal; one iron and car wheel factory, one general edge tool factory, one boiler manufactory, and one saw factory. A large and very extensive business is carried on in the manufacture of wagons, carriages, agricultural implements, plow making, bucket, tub, churn, and wooden ware, planing mills, doors, sash and window blinds, pump and block making, lath and general wood sawing establishments, broom manufactory and cabinet ware in all its varieties, for the home and western markets, together with other manufactories, of which wood and iron are the staples.

It has two good woolen manufactories, manufacturing goods to the amount of $100,000 per annum, one paper mill doing a good business, flouring mills, manufacturing from four hundred to five hundred barrels of flour per day; two soap and candle factories, three plumbing and gas fitting establishments, one silver ware and plating manufactory, two engravers of wood and copper, one pottery and stone ware, three gun and pistol factories, three Morocco and lining skin factories, several boot and shoe factories, and hides and leather. The wholesale business is carried on in this city extensively, and many large wholesale and retail establishments of dry goods, groceries, hardware, drugs, clothing, books and stationery, have day by day been added to its already large mercantile interests, and yet all are amply patronized. The demands of the country merchant can be supplied upon terms equal to those offered in eastern cities. Mercantile men throughout the State are becoming aware of these facts, and are making Indianapolis the head quarters of their trade. Persons unacquainted with the extent of its business will be astounded at the amount of exchange done by the banks and brokers of this city. The exchange each year will not fall short of fifteen millions of dollars. Knowing this to be a healthful and prosperous condition of mercantile interest, men, who would consult their own gains, should look about for the reasons. The whole secret is embraced in the fact that the merchants of Indianapolis can at all times of the year supply themselves with every article of merchandise direct from the manufactories, and upon very short notice. Rents, clerk hire, and every expense is much reduced comparatively with Eastern cities, so that prices can be brought to compete with any Eastern market. Freights, insurance and other incidentals are greatly decreased when large stocks are purchased, and therefore its wholesale establishments can furnish the country merchant cheaper than he could purchase and forward his stocks from Eastern or Southern cities. These advantages will daily increase as the patronage of country merchants becomes more extended, both parties will be greatly benefitted, country merchants can constantly keep a perfect supply, and make quick turns of their capital; and the wholesale establishments of Indianapolis will increase in number and importance. It is for the interest of every merchant in Indiana to make Indianapolis his place of purchase and sale.

There are in the city three large pork dealing and packing houses. These houses employ a number of hands in the pork packing season and kill some 100,000 hogs. There is also a beef packing establishment doing a large business.

There are four firms who transact a real estate business, have several millions of dollars' worth of real estate for sale, but, from the peculiar nature of many of their transactions in which they simply find a purchaser or a seller without carrying the whole transaction through, there is much of their business which does not appear upon their books beyond the simple entry of the fee for such portion of the business as they transact, consequently it is impossible to give the actual figures of their business. Many heavy transactions are commenced by them in which the parties to the purchase or sale conclude all the particulars and the payments themselves.

Book and job printing is largely carried on by the following firms, viz.: Bingham & Doughty, proprietors of the Daily and Weekly State Sentinel, with whose establishment is connected a large and extensive book bindery and embossing machine. A heavy business is annually done by this firm. The Indianapolis Journal Company, proprietors of the Indianapolis Daily and Weekly State Journal, are doing a good business. Cameron & McNeely, proprietors of the Daily Citizen and Weekly Citizen—doing a fine business. Elder & Harkness, proprietors of the Weekly Locomotive.

There are also the following newspapers and publications, viz: The Commercial Telegram, (monthly,) published by C. C. Butler. The Free Press, (German) weekly, Richard Henninger, proprietor. The Volksblatt, (German) weekly, Julius Boetticher, proprietor. The Herald and Era (theological paper,) Williamson & Lee, publishers. The Witness, (a religious paper) weekly, published by M. G. Clark. The National Democrat, published by the National Democrat Company, (weekly,) The Indiana School Journal, (monthly) published by State Teachers' Association. The American, (weekly) published by T. A. Goodwin. The Christian Record, (monthly) published by J. M. Matthews. The Indiana Farmer, (monthly) published by Ray & Wellhouse. The Public Advertiser, (monthly) published by Cameron & McNeely, and the Repository of Religion and Literature, (African) published quarterly, by Rev. Bishop Payne and others. One piano forte establishment doing a business of $30,000 per annum, and who sell annually some fifty piano fortes.

Indianapolis has two Home Insurance Companies doing business in the city, and throughout the State of Indiana exclusively, together with several agencies of foreign companies, whose aggregate receipts of premiums amounted to $50,000, covering risks to the value of $5,000,000.

Very few, if any, inland cities in the Western States can boast of as many monuments of architectural beauty as can the Railroad City. Her churches (twenty-six in number) are chiefly built of brick, vying in beauty of design and finish with those of older cities.

Odd Fellows' Hall, which was built in 1854, at an expense of $43,000, is one of the finest and most prominent specimens of architectural skill in the State, and is a great ornament to the city. The State House, erected at a cost of $60,000, stands in the center of a beautifully arranged square, gorgeously diversified with trees, shrubs, gravel walks and grass plats, reminding the passer-by that a thing of beauty is a joy forever.

Masonic Hall is another building of much prominence, within whose walls the mantle of masonry has fallen upon many of the great and good men of the State.

Among the many fine edifices erected during the past year may be mentioned the Episcopalian (Christ Church), being built in the Gothic style, of rough ashlar dressed limestone. The Third Presbyterian Church, on the corner of Illinois and Market streets.

A four story with basement brick block, erected by Judge Blackford, on the southeast corner of Washington and Meridian streets, reflects great credit upon the enterprise of the owner and the skill of the builder.

The Metropolitan Theater, erected by Valentine Butsch, and which has just been completed, although not so large as "The National" of Boston, is nevertheless quite as perfect in its appointments and adaptations to the art dramatique, and an appropriate resort for those who would worship at the shrine of Thespis. It is 125 feet deep, by 82 feet in width, built of brick, the front being finished with a grey cement, which imparts to it a very neat appearance. The interior is well arranged and will accommodate two thousand persons. The decorations are second to none in the United States. The rich frescos which adorn the auditorium, and the act drop, exhibiting "Cole's Voyage of Life," were executed by S. W. Gulick, who, as a scenic artist, has won a reputation such as few of his profession have ever attained.

The new Court House and Post Office, when finished, will be the most substantial building in the State, and really the master piece, both in point of design and workmanship. Numerous other fine buildings are in process of erection, which, when completed, will add much to the interest and beauty of the place.

THE INDIANAPOLIS BUILDING, LOAN FUND AND SAVINGS ASSOCIATION.

This association was organized in August, 1855, and shares to the number of 562½ were subscribed for by the members, each share being $500. The association has been in operation three years, and has, during that time, received for entrance fees, monthly dues, interest and fines, the sum of $37,202 00; while it has loaned on 190½ shares redeemed, $32,219 00, and paid for 66 shares withdrawn, $2,953 50, and for expenses, $2,056 38.

The whole number of shares being 562½, and of those redeemed, withdrawn and forfeited, 270½, there remain unredeemed and in force, 292. The money received for monthly dues, interest and fines is loaned to members of the association at each regular monthly meeting.

This association has been the means of enabling a large number of its members (with limited resources) to purchase houses of their own. The amount loaned is paid in monthly dues of $2 on each share, with interest on the sum so loaned; and by this process a large number of persons are now living in their own dwellings, at less than they would have to pay for rent, and with the advantage of reaping themselves the increase in value of their property. The money loaned on the redemption of shares is secured by mortgage on real estate worth double the amount loaned, making it secure beyond a doubt.

The plan, on which this association is organized and acts, is self-extinguishing, and it has been gradually closing up itself from the very commencement, by the application of its funds at each monthly meeting in the purchasing of shares; thereby constantly reducing their number. Taking the operations of the association for the three years of its existence, there is every reason to believe that it will close up in from seven to eight years from its organization.

While almost all classes of stocks are now, and have been, selling for much less than par, and very many cannot be sold at any price, the stock of this association has always sold at par, and is now at a premium, with an upward tendency. Persons who have spare means are purchasing this stock, as a safe and profitable investment, assured that they can, at any regular meeting of the association, dispose of their shares, and get the funds at once to enable them to purchase property, or make improvements.

The Union Railway Company was organized in 1850, and the depot was finished for the reception of the trains in the fall of 1853. The plan originated with John Brough and O. H. Smith, Esqs., and was carried into operation by the Madison, the Bellefontaine, and the Terre Haute Railroad Companies. It consists of a common trunk for all the railroads centering at Indianapolis, with a passenger depot erected upon it, in which the passengers from all the roads enter and leave the cars, and where exchanges of cars are made without cost, for the passengers and baggage.

This main trunk is connected with the several freight depots by branch tracks.

Subsequently to the organization of this company the Indianapolis and Cincinnati, and the Indiana Companies were admitted as equal partners; and the Union Depot Companies, as it now exists, is composed of the Madison and Indianapolis, the Bellefontaine, the Terre Haute and Richmond, the Indianapolis and Cincinnati, and the Indiana Central Companies as equal partners. The president of each of these companies being a director of the Union Company, from whom a presiding officer is chosen.

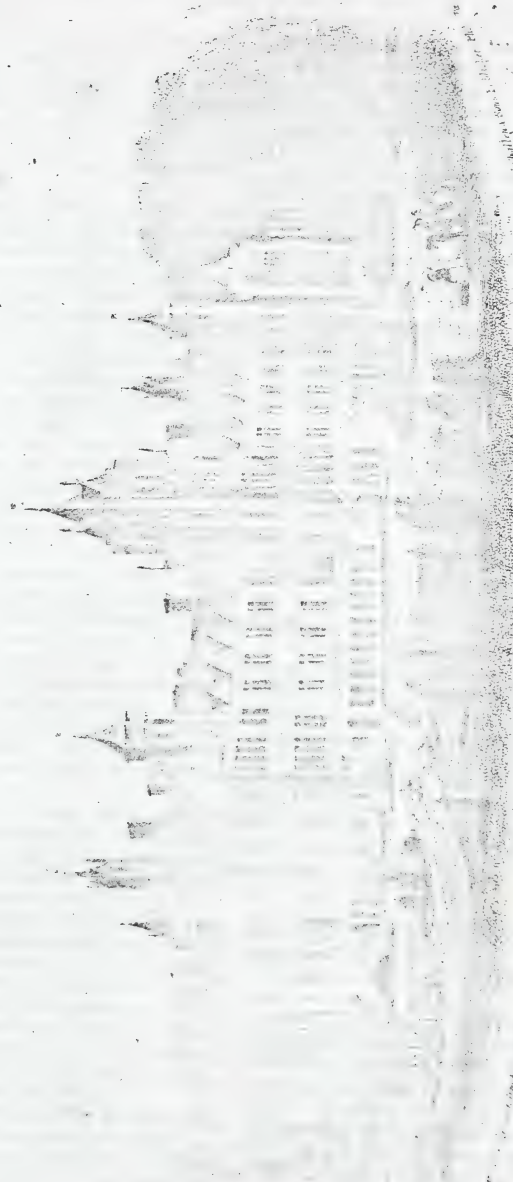

The other companies are now using the Union Depot and tracks on rental; and as new roads are made to the city, ample provision will be made for their admission to this new, indispensable arrangement.

The entire cost of the Union Depot, tracks and right of way is about one hundred and thirty thousand dollars.

There are eight railroads completed, and each has its terminus at Indianapolis. This place is noted for its magnificent depots, especially for its main passenger station, or Union Depot, where all the railroads leading to the city connect. An idea may be conceived of the advantages accruing to the Railroad City from the fact that the citizens out of eighty of the ninety-one counties in the State can leave their homes, visit Indianapolis, attend to business, and return the same day. It is estimated that from three to four thousand persons visit the city every twenty-four hours, and that nearly one hundred different trains pass in and out of the city daily.

It has only one bank of issue, viz., the Branch Bank of the State of Indiana, with a capital of $150,000. The parent Bank is located here, and has a capital paid in of $2,271,826 02 up to 31st July, 1858. It has its branch banks located as follows, viz.: Lima, Laporte, Plymouth, South Bend, Fort Wayne, Lafayette, Logansport, Indianapolis, Richmond, Connersville, Rushville, Madison, Jeffersonville, New Albany, Bedford, Evansville, Vincennes, Terre Haute, Muncie and Lawrenceburgh.

Indianapolis is noted for its fine and well regulated hotels. Perhaps no other city in the West can boast of as good hotels—being almost all houses of the first class. Among the most prominent are the Bates House, on the north-west corner of Illinois and West Washington streets—a very beautiful building. Little's Hotel, on the south-east corner of East Washington and New Jersey streets. This House has been in operation for twenty-eight years. Palmer House, on the south-east corner of Illinois and West Washington streets. Wright House, south side of Washington, between Meridian and Pennsylvania streets. American Hotel, on Louisiana street, opposite Union Depot. There are several others, the Tremont, Galt, Ray House, &c.

The city has no public free schools, but there are a number of private or select schools, each well attended, and under the care of competent preceptors; also, a high school, well conducted, and under the charge of W. D. Henkle, resident and mathematical editor of the Indiana School Journal, Principal.

Indianapolis is the seat of a very fine University, entitled the "NORTH-WESTERN CHRISTIAN UNIVERSITY." This institution is located in the north-eastern portion of the city of Indianapolis. The edifice is of brick, with stone foundation, quoins and copings. The style of architecture is the Collegiate Gothic—happily blending the substantial with the symmetric and graceful. The campus is a plot of twenty-five acres, covered with the primitive forest whose rich foliage and dense shades can hardly fail to suggest to the classic student the consecrated glories of the ancient Academy. The age of this Institution is three years. Some of the evidences of its prosperity are the following, viz.: 1st, The attendance of students the first year was 113; second year, 145; third year, 178. 2d, The number of Literary graduates, 9; the number of Law, 4. 3d, The Literary Societies are two, the Mathesian and Pythonean, both prosperous and vigorous. 4th, The financial prosperity is indicated by the amount of stock secured to the Company, which is $103,800, besides $20,000 or $25,000 outstanding on unclosed subscriptions.

The usual chemical and philosophical apparatus is already secured, also a superior cabinet of minerals. This Institution is under the patronage of the Christian Church. Its religious character is thus defined in the charter: "A part of the work of the Institution shall be to teach and inculcate Christian faith and Christian morality as taught in the Sacred Scriptures, discarding as uninspired and without authority all writings, formulas, creeds and articles of faith subsequent thereto." Conformably to the spirit of the charter, the Bible is used as a text-book.

This is one of the healthful advances of the age. But why may not this book become general in our institutions of learning, running as a golden thread through both the warp and woof of an American education, thereby, in the language of the Mathematical Professor of this Institution, "invincing to the world the wholesome truth that the groves of Academies are capable of growing both the tree of knowledge and the tree of life?"

The Institution is open to both sexes, furnishing to any young ladies who may so desire a course of study co-equal with that secured to male students. Of this feature the Faculty so far are able to speak favorably. While there are other colleges in the West, as Antioch and Baldwin Universities, Ohio, and Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, embodying the same plan, there are none in this State but the one above named.

May not this system of education be one of the agencies of securing to woman that broad and liberal development that shall make her not a doll of fashion or an observant of popinjay flatteries, but a woman, a true companion and help meet for man?

MUNSON'S Copper Tubular Lightning Rod

WITH SPIRAL FLANGES; HAS RECEIVED

THE FIRST PREMIUM!

AT EVERY

State Fair, or Exhibition,

Of any kind, wherever displayed,

Including the American Institute, of New York City, which awarded a Prize Medal to the inventor; the Franklin Institute, of Philadelphia, Pa.; the National Fair, at its exhibition held at Louisville, Ky.; the State Fair of Indiana, and the State Fairs of Ohio and Connecticut.

We respectfully refer to:

JAS. S. ATSON, Superintendent of the Indiana Hospital for the Insane.

R. T. BROWN, M. D., of Crawfordsville, Indiana, State Geologist.

JOHN YOUNG, Professor of Natural Science, in North-Western Christian University.

DRS. PARVIN and KITCHEN, Indianapolis, Indiana.

LORIN ANDREWS, President of Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio.

I. P. COATES, Secretary of Board of Trade, 5 Brady street, Davenport, Iowa.

State and County Rights for Sale, and Rods
Furnished at Wholesale.

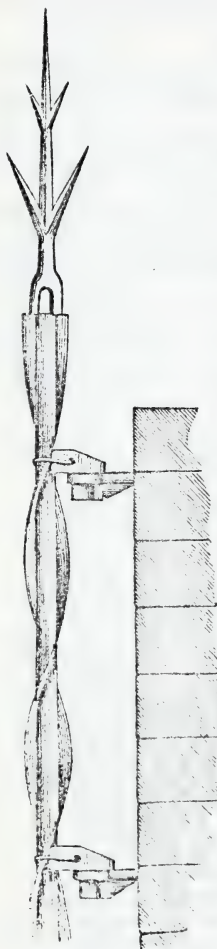

The recommendations which my new Lightning Rod has received from all scientific men who have examined it, the high honor which has been awarded it above all competition at the Institutes and Fairs wherever exhibited, its undoubted practical usefulness, as demonstrated frequently during severe storms, in several years past, and the very liberal patronage it has received from an intelligent public, wherever introduced, justifies me in saying that it has no equal. For those not acquainted with its qualities, I will add that its conducting power is equal to fifteen ordinary iron rods; that it resists the action of the atmosphere, remaining firm and serviceable for an age, and is ornamental on the best of buildings.

For Rods at Wholesale or Retail, call on or address,

DAVID MUNSON,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PROF. UPDEGRAFF,

Formerly resident Physician at Willis' Hospital, Philadelphia, and for many years Principal of the Danville Eye and Ear Infirmary, Professor of Anatomy, and Lecturer upon Physiology, has taken an office in this place, and will operate on all surgical diseases, and begs leave to inform the public that all diseases of the Eye and Ear (with few exceptions) are curable; and will operate on Cataract, Cross Eyes, Artificial Pupil, Opacities of the Cornea, Inverted Eye Lids, Sore Eyes, and all diseases of the organ. Deafness, difficulty of Hearing, even when the drum is entirely gone, will insert an artificial, answering nearly all the purposes of the natural. He will also operate on Club Feet, Tumors, Cancers, Morbid Growths, Deformities from Burns, Contracted Limbs, perform the operation for Artificial Nose, by healing on a new one, and insert Artificial Eyes, giving them all the motion and expression of the natural, defying detection. They are inserted without removing the old one, or producing pain. The superior advantages he has had in Europe and this country in perfecting himself in all that is new and valuable in surgery, warrants him in saying that everything within the bounds of the profession may be expected of him.

TO THE BALD.—You can have your hair restored, no matter how bald you are. One week's time, in most cases, being sufficient to produce a hair from every follicle that produced a hair before. Gray hair can be restored to its natural color without dying.

BRYANT'S Commercial College,

RAMSAY'S BLOCK, CORNER ILLINOIS AND MARYLAND STREETS,
ONE SQUARE SOUTH PALMER HOUSE,

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

The facilities for acquiring a thorough Business Education at this School have been increased till now unsurpassed. The room is one of the largest and best ventilated in the west, and in addition to the Teachers formerly connected with the School, we expect to secure the services of a gentleman who has had over twenty years' experience as a Merchant and active business man. The regular lecturers hereafter will be Dr. R. T. BROWN, GEO. K. PERRIN, Esq., JOHN COBURN, Esq., and the Principal, each of whom are well known.

The large number graduating at this School in the past year has far surpassed every expectation, while nine-tenths of them are in good business, and fully establishes the assertion that it is not only the cheapest but most thorough School in the west.

Each pupil, on bearing satisfactory examination, will receive a Diploma that is acknowledged to surpass any in the Union. The original design of which (may be seen at all times at our room) cost us months of labor.

The Course of Studies embraces not only Book-Keeping, but all the connecting branches, such as Penmanship, Mercantile Arithmetic, Mercantile Correspondence, Detecting Counterfeit Money, &c., with daily lectures on Mercantile Law, and such subjects as are essential to every man.

Terms for complete course, with right of reviewing at pleasure, $25.00.

JEFFERSONVILLE,

A City of Clark county, situated on the Ohio river, at the head of the Falls, nearly opposite Louisville, Kentucky, 40 miles below Madison, 4 miles above New Albany, and 12 miles south-west from Charlestown, the county seat. It is located on the site of old fort Steuben, on elevated ground affording a delightful view of the city of Louisville, of the meandering Ohio for several miles, with its verdant islands, winding its way among the sloping hills, whose rich foliage could be but equalled by the famous Alpines, the vine-clad hills of Spain or the dazzling Orient. The Ohio is about a mile wide at this point, and at its lowest stage has water sufficient for boats of the largest class. The fall here is twenty-two feet in less than two miles, affording a water power unsurpassed if not unequalled in the United States, and which has laid entirely unimproved until within the past three years. There is now one fine flouring mill in successful operation and capable of turning out one hundred and fifty barrels of flour per day at any season of the year. In point of manufacturing facilities, Jeffersonville stands without a rival. She is the present terminus of the Jeffersonville and Indianapolis Railroad, and with a canal around the falls, might become the most important point on the Ohio river. The State Prison located here, is always full, and adds but little, if any, to the morality or prosperity of the place.

The facilities for steamboat building are good, and which has been extensively carried on heretofore.

The streets run at right angles, are wide and well paved. There are more miles of paving in this town than in any other place of its size in the state. It contains one of the finest flouring mills in the state, has several manufacturing establishments, stores, &c. Population 3,500.

KNIGHTSTOWN,

A post town of Henry county, situated on the Indiana Central Railway, 32 miles from Indianapolis, and is the present terminus of the Knightstown and Shelbyville Railroad. It is located on the west bank of Blue river, in the south-west corner of the county. The town was laid out by W. Carey in 1828, since which time several important additions have been made. In an agricultural, as well as commercial point of view, Knightstown possesses advantages over many other towns of Eastern Indiana, being surrounded by an extremely fertile and highly productive region, whose people are intellectual, industrious, and healthy. The health of this place is unsurpassed, having never been visited by an epidemic of any kind.

The Knightstown Chalybeate Springs, about a mile distant, afford a fine summer retreat, and are much prized for their extraordinary curative qualities and the romantic scenery which surrounds them.

Montgomery creek, a never failing stream, affords the town an abundant water-power, which drives several fine flouring mills, manufacturing a large quantity of flour, a great portion of which is shipped to foreign markets. The general business of the place renders it a point of much importance.

It contains three flouring mills, one saw mill, two hotels, six dry goods stores, four bakers and confectioners, two blacksmiths, one book store, seven boot and shoe makers, one brick maker, five carpenters, two cabinet makers, one carriage and coach factory, three wagon factories, one clothing store, one general store, two dress makers, two furniture dealers, five grain and produce dealers, one printing office, six harness makers, four grocers, one hardware store, three resident farmers,

LAFAYETTE,

The seat of justice of Tippecanoe county, is situated at the head of navigation on the Wabash River, on the line of the Wabash and Erie Canal—the line of the Toledo, Wabash and Western Railroad—the New Albany and Salem Railroad, and the Lafayette and Indianapolis and Lafayette and LaSalle Railroads, in latitude 40° 23' north, and in longitude 9° 47' west from Washington. It was laid out on May 17, 1825, by William Digby, on a part of the south fraction of the south-east quarter of section 29, township 23 north, of range 4 west, which was purchased by him from Government, December 24, 1824.

On the same day on which the town plat was surveyed, Mr. Digby sold the entire plot, (with the exception of one fractional lot,) and 20 acres of land adjoining the plat, to Samuel Sargent for the paltry sum of $240. On the same day Mr. Sargent sold an interest in the town plot to Mr. Isaac C. Ellston, Mr. John Wilson and Mr. Jonathan Powers, who jointly offered to the county all the even numbered lots in the plot, on condition that the seat of justice was located therein. As a further inducement to effect this object, Mr. Sargent offered 10 acres, Mr. R. Kelsey 10 acres, and Mr. R. Alexander 10 acres, all adjoining the town plat. The offer was accepted, and in September, 1826, the whole matter was consummated by the favorable report of the locating commissioners and the action of the Board of Justices of the county. Since that date fifty-eight separate additions have been made to the original town plat by different individuals, so that now the city with its suburban additions covers a surface of about two miles square, while the city proper contains a population of about 11,000 souls.

The earliest improvements were made along the river between Columbia and Ferry, and Ferry street was the principal business street in the city, owing to the fact that the city Hotel was on it and the Ferry, with Digby's and Hamar's grocery at the foot of it. The Court-house was between Ferry and Main, on the river bank, and the Post Office was situated between Main and Columbia, on the river bank.

The first step towards incorporating Lafayette was at an election held September 7, 1829, at which there were 52 votes for and 13 against incorporating, under the act of January 30, 1824. On the 14th of September there was an election held, at which Joseph S. Hanna, Stephen Taylor, Jesse Andrew, Reuben White and John H. Shaffner were elected trustees. J. S. Hanna was elected President, J. White, Assessor, J. Bartholomew, Treasurer, and A. S. White, Clerk.

There was a regular organization of the Board of Trustees from this time until 1840, from which time until March 19, 1845, there either was no organization, or at least no records can be found. On March 19, 1845, the organization was again perfected by electing as President and Trustees, A. Loyd, President, M. H. Winton, O. Ball, W. Rank and A. Bartholomew, Trustees, J. Deming, Clerk, M. L. Peirce, Treasurer, S. H. Becker, Marshal and Collector. This organization continued until May, 1853, when a new organization was effected under the style of "the Mayor and Common Council." James O'Brian was elected Mayor, and Messrs. Sperin, McClure, Stackhouse, Bemiss, Underwood, Maxwell, Little, Smith, Weaver and Breakenridge, were elected Council; Leechman, Clerk; Dame, Attorney; Toole, Assessor; Brackney, Street Commissioner; Chissom, Marshal. Under this Board the Fire Company was organized in its incipient stages.

Mr. O'Brian served two terms, Mr. D. Miller, one term, and Jno. S. Williams, one term, when in 1857 a new act of incorporation was passed on March 9, 1857, and on the 16th of the same month a new organization was effected.

There are fourteen churches in Lafayette, built chiefly of brick, and some of them in elegant style. The new Episcopal and Presbyterian churches are a credit to the city.

From the earliest period of the settlement of the place a prominent feature in its history was a marked attention to the education of the young. Discussion was provoked on this subject, and that of religious affairs, in an early number of the Free Press, in 1829, which elicited the facts that at that early period good schools were provided for all who needed them. From that time to the present, during all the changes in the corporate existence of the place, education was never lost sight of, but ample provision was constantly made so far as the law permitted. Private schools of a high grade have ever been kept up, and public schools, either as County Seminary or Public City Schools, have received all due attention. The last organization for this purpose, in the city, was under the act of 1852, when Israel Spencer, John Purdue, W. P. Heath, J. Casad, and Samuel Hoover were appointed Common School Trustees, with whom was inaugurated the system which, until lately, was conducted with such happy results.

In 1853 an enumeration of the children showed that there were 1,716 children in the city legally entitled to school privileges under the law. A tax was imposed on the property in the city, and school houses built in different parts of the city, costing about $22,000. These buildings are plain, neat, but large, airy and convenient, and well calculated to meet the wants of the schools in every respect. Much credit is due to all the members of the several Boards of Trustees, but to Israel Spencer, Dr. C. F. Wilstach, R. S. Ford and R. Heath, who were almost constantly in the Board, and to whom mainly the city is indebted for the thorough organization of the schools, is the most praise due, for their constant gratuitous attention to the interests of the public in this matter.

Unhappily a late decision of the Supreme Court, on the subject of the powers of cities in the support of schools, has destroyed all that was gained by the years of experience under the late laws.

The Commissioners of the county, upon petition, determined to employ Mr. Mc-Kay, of Baltimore, Maryland, a gentleman of experience in the business of boring for water, to try the experiment in the Public Square, with the view of obtaining a supply of pure, wholesome water, and at the same time determine the practicability of boring artesian wells successfully in this region. The experiment was successful beyond their most sanguine expectations. Instead of procuring pure water alone, at the depth of 230 feet, they struck upon a stream of medicinal water of the greatest value, a careful analysis of which proves it to compare favorably with the most celebrated mineral waters of Europe. So soon as its medicinal qualities were tested, it became an object of great interest to invalids here and elsewhere, and large quantities were shipped to great distances in all directions.

The water flows in a constant stream sufficient to supply the wants of all who may wish to avail themselves of it, either for drinking or bathing purposes. Immediate measures will be taken to render it permanently and easily attended by all.

The analysis of this water has proved its great similarity to that of the celebrated Blue Lick Springs of Kentucky, over which it enjoys some advantages. It belongs to the class of white Sulphur waters, from the nature of the deposits when flowing over wood or stone, or when exposed for a short time to the air. The quantity of common salt which it contains entitles it to the name of a salt sulphur water, by another system of classification.

The diseases to which this water is applicable, are those for which all sulphur springs are suitable. These diseases are numerous, viz: Bronchitis, rheumatism, dyspepsia, diseases of the liver, kidneys, sexual organs, and in general for disturbances of the secretive organs or surfaces.

The city of Lafayette enjoys a pre-eminent advantage over almost all the watering places, from the fact that invalids can secure home advantages suited to every purse at all seasons of the year. It is reasonable to expect, therefore, that this spring will be much frequented in the winter time.

The Lafayette Branch of the State Bank of Indiana, and the Lafayette Branch of the Bank of the State of Indiana are located in this city.

The former of these institutions is about closing business, as its charter expires in January, 1860. The latter is the branch of the new bank, chartered under the late General Banking Law. These are the only Banks of issue in the city.

The following are Banks of Exchange and Deposit only.

Reynolds' Bank, Lafayette Bank, and Commercial Bank. All are esteemed safe, are managed carefully, and have the entire confidence of the public.

No place in the West is supplied with better hotels than is the city of Lafayette. From Johnson's Hotel, in 1826, through the "Seven Stars," in 1829, the earliest hotels in the place, to the present time, the wants of the traveler have been cared for, and at all times he could here find the best and most pleasant home desirable among strangers. There are many good hotels now in the place. The Bramble House, corner of South and Ohio streets; the Jones Hotel (formerly Lafayette House), on same streets, diagonally situated from the Bramble; the Ballard House, on Mississippi, between Columbia and South streets; the City Hotel, on Main street, west of the Square; the Lahr Hotel, corner of Main and Mississippi streets; the Junction House; American Hotel; Dell's Hotel; Railroad Exchange; Burnett; Tinney House, and St. Charles.

From the earliest settlement of the West there has been regular septennial floods, which have caused great destruction of property. The first flood in the Wabash, within the memory of the earliest white inhabitants, occurred in February, 1828. The rise then was greater than at any time since, being eighteen inches higher than the flood of 1858.

In 1837 there was another flood; in 1844 another, and in 1851 still another. All these were heavy, and produced great loss; but none since 1828 rose so high or so rapidly, or remained so long, or did so much damage, as that of June 11, 1858. The entire spring had been wet, and the water courses high. On Thursday night a very heavy rain came up, which was so general in its range that all the tributary streams were full to overflowing, and, in consequence, the Wabash rose at the rate of four inches per hour during all of the 11th, and at midnight stood at its highest, at which time the river and canal, foot of Main street, were on a perfect level. The entire piers of the Wabash bridge, except six tiers of stone, were covered. Mr. Winter, an able artist of Lafayette, has perpetuated the scene from nature in a painting of unspeakable value, as a faithful representation of an object of great interest in the history of Lafayette.

The destruction of property along the course of the river was great, and on all the lines of railroad crossing the water courses tributary to the Wabash.

The season's work was thereby much retarded, and in July the remarkable sight was common of planting corn in one field and harvesting wheat in the next on the same day.

It will not be denied that in early times Lafayette was, to a great extent, unhealthy. Water was stagnant, vegetation was rank and luxuriant in growth, the houses were poor, and the habits of a very great number of the people, as in all frontier settlements, were such as to favor the frequent attacks of all diseases incident to the West. But those times are past. The ground is brought into cultivation, the pools and swamps are either drained or filled up, the dwellings are neat, pleasant, healthy, and in many instances erected and maintained in the highest degree of taste and splendor. The habits of the people are moral and orderly, and while everything exists to conduce to health, everything proves that no healthier place can be found in the Wabash valley, or indeed in the Great West. The bills of mortality will compare favorably with any other city in the West of the Union.

Situated on the east bank of the Wabash, and skirted all around by bluffs and hills, there are presented sights of almost regal magnificence for dwellings and suburban villas.

But it is not alone in the healthfulness of the place, in the intelligence and moral character of the citizens, or in the beauty of the location, that Lafayette relies, in claiming to rank ere long among the first cities of the West. Her geographical situation marks her out as a city excelled by few, if any, in all the elements necessary to render her one of the greatest manufacturing cities of the West.

By river she has an internavigation, without reshipment, with fifteen States of the Union, passing through three hundred and thirty-six counties of different States, in a course of 11,212 miles, inhabited by a population of 4,527,025 souls, owning farms—live stock and products of one year equal to $907,717,866. By canal she is united to the Lakes and the States bordering thereon in the East, and the Mississippi and Gulf in the South. By railroad she is united to the East, West, North and South, in every conceivable point of the compass, while by river, railroad and canal she is united with every county in the State except thirteen, representing about 10,000,000 acres of land, worth over $100,000,000, producing in one year nearly $5,000,000 worth of products of soil. These statements may look wild, but they are fully borne out by reference to the map, and to the census of 1850.

Immediately around the city, for miles, lies one of the richest portions of country under the sun. By river, canal, and creeks, sites for machinery propelled by water can be obtained of any amount of power, while by railroad and canal it is brought into the immediate neighborhood of inexhaustible mines of coal, iron and clay, and other materials necessary to carry on successfully all kinds of manufactures.

Lafayette is eminently possessed of all the elements necessary to a great manufacturing city. It needs but enterprise and capital properly expended to make it soon, what it must be ere long, the STAR CITY OF THE WEST.

LAFAYETTE JOURNAL.—The first newspaper ever published in this place was the Journal and Free Press, published by John B. Semans, on 23d September, 1829. The Weekly Free Press is still in existence, having been now published thirty years without any interruption or change of name. It is now issued as a daily, tri-weekly and weekly, by W. G. & C. M. Terrell. The paper enjoys a large patronage, has the city and post office printing, and is Republican in politics.

LAFAYETTE ARGUS.—A large weekly newspaper, published by R. Spicer. This paper was formerly called the Lafayette Daily American, and its publication continued under that name until August, 1857, when the name was changed to the "Daily Argus." Shortly after the present proprietor issued the enlarged weekly, under the name of the Lafayette Argus. It is one of the largest weeklies in the State, and is well patronized. Politics Democratic.

LAFAYETTE COURIER.—This paper is published daily, tri-weekly and weekly, by Wm. S. Lingle. It was originally established about the year 1845, and was published as a weekly paper exclusively until 1849, when the daily was established. Politics Republican.

LAFAYETTE ARGUS JOB PRINTING

ESTABLISHMENT,

South-west Corner of the Public Square,
LAFAYETTE, INDIANA.

Extensive additions of the latest and most approved styles of plain and ornamental Job Type, Borders, &c., have recently been made to the previous ample assortments, which enables me to execute any variety of Job Printing the community may be pleased to order, in a style unsurpassed for neatness, and at reasonable rates.

POSTERS.—My facilities for doing Posters are unsurpassed, and having a press three sizes larger than any in the city, enables me to turn out Posters unequalled for size or style. Special attention is invited to this fact.

THE ARGUS is one of the largest Weeklies in the State, and having a general and extensive city and country circulation, offers superior advantages as an advertising medium—the same that would be enjoyed by advertising in both the Daily and Weekly issues of either of the other papers.

R. SPICER, Prop'r.

LAFONTAINE,

A post office of Wabash county.

LA GRANGE,

The county seat of La Grange county, is situated in the geographical center of the county, on Fly Creek, a tributary of Pigeon River. The stream is small but very durable, and affords excellent hydraulic power for propelling machinery. It contains five dry goods, three grocery, and two hardware stores, two hotels, with the usual variety of the professions, and mechanical trades, such as shoe makers, blacksmiths, cabinet makers, carpenters, tailors, saddlers, &c. There are two beautiful churches, one seminary, a district school house, and two other private schools. Although there are at present no natural or artificial thoroughfares by which to carry on an extensive trade with other places, yet the pick axe, shovels, wheelbarrows and carts, with sturdy hearts and willing hands to wield them, are gradually leveling the hills and filling the valleys, preparatory for the iron horse to travel upon the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad, which, when completed, will give the citizens of La Grange facilities for travel and shipping their products to other and larger markets. Population 700.

Upon the north-west, and immediately adjoining the city plat, is Clear Lake, which furnishes a popular place of amusement, a lasting fountain of water, and subserves many other desirable and valuable purposes. LOGANSPORT,

The county seat of Cass county, named after the Shawnee chief, Logan, nephew of Tecumseh, and the friend of Gen. Harrison's army in the war of 1812, who fell in a rencontre with a party of the enemy, on the banks of the Miami of the Lake, in 1812, and is situated at the confluence of the Wabash and Eel rivers. It was laid off in the spring of 1828, on a tract of land, reserved to George Cicott, by the treaty with the Potawattamie Indians in the fall of 1826. Hugh B. McKeen, Gen. John Tipton,, and Chauncey Carter, became interested in the reserve, and they divided the tract among themselves. Chauncey Carter became the proprietor of that portion now lying west of the canal and extending to the "Point" or junction of the rivers, which he laid off into lots, and which is known as the "original plat." General Tipton took the portion lying east of the last named tract between the rivers, and which has since been laid off into additions to the town; and Mr. McKeen became proprietor of the portion lying north of Eel river, which has since been laid off into West Logan. Logansport with its additions, including West Logan and Brownstown, on the north side of Eel river, and Taborville, on the south side of the Wabash, contains at this time a population of about 4,500 inhabitants. Its progress has been firm and steady, though not at any time rapid. Its position as a manufacturing town, is one of the best, if not indeed the best in the western country. The Wabash and Eel rivers, at and near this point, afford fine falls of water, which, with a proper capital and enterprise, could be readily converted to extensive manufacturing purposes. The falls of Eel river, at Logansport, are in part improved by the erection of a flouring mill, running six pairs of stones, and a sawing mill, running two circular and one straight saw, for the manufacture of lumber, vaneering and box timber; but the falls of the Wabash, containing much the largest body of water, is yet entirely unimproved. Besides these advantages, Logansport also stands in the midst of a country possessing an excellent soil, fine timber, and an abundance of lime and free stone. Its business, and especially its exporting trade, is surpassed by few towns of its size. The favorable position it occupies in regard to the lines of the Wabash and Erie canal, the Toledo, Wabash and Western railroad, and the Cincinnati and Chicago railroad, which intersect at this point, will always ensure to it the trade of a large scope of country, which it now commands. Logansport is handsomely situated, and contains many elegant public and private buildings. A number of these buildings are of the stone in the vicinity, and present a neat and substantial appearance.

It is situated about 12 miles from Crown Point, the county seat, and 50 miles from Chicago. This is one of the towns for which the west is so celebrated, growing up in half a dozen years, with a rapidity astonishing, where in the east a half century is required to develop the limited resources of a small town or village. Lowell has been settled about 10 years, and is noted for its rapid growth, the energy and activity of its citizens, and for being situated in one of the best farming counties in the State. One of its chief attractions is the superior water privileges, which enables the manufacturers to do a good business during most of the year. MADISON,

Is situated on the north bank of the Ohio river, 81 miles south-south-east of Indianapolis, in latitude 38° 46' north, longitude 85° 21' west, 100 miles below Cincinnati, and 50 miles above the city of Louisville. The city is beautifully situated in a valley of near three miles in length, which is enclosed on the north by hills rising in height near four hundred feet. The city is situated some fifty feet above the highest floods. It has a population now of 12,000 inhabitants; is noted for its beauty, being one of the best built cities in all the West; is very healthy, and in this respect surpasses all other towns in the State.

Of the early history of Madison we learn the original proprietors were John Paul, Jonathan Lyon and others. Settlements were founded here as early as 1808. The first sale of town lots was made at public auction on February 11th and 12th, in 1811. Col. Jno. Vawter acting as the auctioneer. The valley near the city was densely timbered, the growth being poplar, walnut, beech, sugartree, and cottonwood. On the river banks willows were growing to the water's edge.

The first white child born here was Dawson Blackmore, jr., and now living in the city.

Madison is an active commercial mart of considerable importance, having many local advantages. Being at the extreme northern line of the great bend of the Ohio River, is nearer to the rich and fertile districts of the central part of the State than any other important town on the river. Iron, coal, salt, groceries, and merchandize, intended for the interior of the State, find at Madison the shortest railroad communication offered by any city on the river. Jefferson county, of which Madison is the county seat, is one of the most populous and wealthy counties in the State, and has an area of 362 square miles. The northern and central portions are nearly level. The soil of the river bottoms and hill is calcareous, and very fertile. A large district of country on the Kentucky side of the river is very populous, containing some of the most highly cultivated farms in the valley of the Ohio, and is naturally connected with Madison for all purposes of trade.

Within a circuit of twenty miles of the city there are thirty villages and seven county towns; there are five plank and macadamized roads leading out of the city; Hanover College is within five miles of the city, an institution of high and well-earned reputation; a steam ferry boat plies to the Kentucky shore, at Milton, opposite Madison; the busy town of North Madison with its machine shops, agricultural implement manufactories, fair grounds, and fine roads in all directions; the best Court House in the State; two spacious market houses, public school houses, three banks, three fire engine houses, eighteen churches, six hotels, and commodious wharves and wharf-boats. The streets are finely graded and graveled. Every street is perfectly drained; well paved walks, with stone flags at the crossings. Gas works, streets lighted; water works owned by the city, with a supply of water from an elevated head, (at the Clifton Springs,) affording an ample supply of water for manufacturing purposes, for families, and a complete protection against fire. There are a large number of schools, public and private, a seminary for young ladies, an academy for boys under the charge of competent teachers, township and county library; an incorporated library, open at all hours of the day, containing several thousand volumes of books; four banking establishments, two local insurance offices, a number of foreign insurance agencies, and a large amount of private capital. There are large wholesale jobbing houses in dry goods, hardware, boots and shoes, groceries, iron, drugs, queensware, &c. More than thirty engines are employed in the various manufacturing establishments; there are five large flouring mills. Madison is a large flour market; receives vast quantities of flour, wheat and corn from the interior of the State. Large quantities of Pennsylvania, Virginia, and Ohio coal are sold at the extensive coal yards, to go to the interior of the State by railroad. Timber is abundant; the oak is peculiar for its rigid qualities, and is unsurpassed for the purposes of ship and steamboat building, farming implements and all other purposes; poplar lumber and shingles are largely exported to St. Louis and Frankfort, Ky.; large quantities of furniture and cooperage are manufactured and exported. The provision trade is very extensive; some of the largest pork packing establishments in the west are located here. Madison brands of pork, lard and bacon have the highest reputation. Marine railway and boat yard, three large foundries and machine shops, railroad car works, engine builders, brass foundry, veneer mills, planing mills; starch, candle and soap factories; glue factories; fan-mill, saddle-tree, carriage and implement makers; extensive breweries, tanneries and distilleries are located in and near the city. Vineyards are extensively cultivated in this vicinity. Below is a statement of the commerce in 1857:

MARION,

The county seat of Grant county, is 33 miles north of Anderson, on the bank of the Mississinnewa River; no railroad in operation. The Marion and Mississinnewa Valley Railroad is laid out through this town, from Union City to Logansport.—It is 70 miles north-east of Indianapolis, 112 from Cincinnati, and 140 miles from Chicago. The trade of this place is chiefly carried on with the farming community, there being no general immediate outlet for heavy produce trade. It is beautifully situated in the bend of the river, and has a rich country around it. The county is rapidly increasing in population and wealth, and bids fair to outstrip many of the older and at present more populous counties. MUNCIE.

Muncie, the county seat of Delaware county, is situated near the geographical center of the county, on the south bank of White River, 54 miles by railroad from Indianapolis, in a beautiful and thickly settled country. The post-office, of the same name, yields a larger revenue than any other in this part of Indiana. The name of the town and post-office was originally "Muncietown," but the Legislature and the Post-office Department have stricken off the "town," and the name of each now stands as at the head of this article.

It is a town of between 2,500 and 3,000 inhabitants, with fine dwellings and public buildings, and convenient streets, ornamented with numerous shade trees. In it there are, besides the county buildings, two fine, large church edifices, built of brick, at an expense each of about $6,000; one of the largest and best arranged flouring mills in the State, driven by water and steam powers, and factories of various kinds, two banks—the one a Branch of the Bank of the State of Indiana, having a good brick bank building—its officers: John Marsh, president, and John W. Burson, cashier. The other, the "Exchange Bank," of Wolfe & Buxton, Masonic and Odd Fellows' Hall, one printing office, the office of the Delaware County Free Press, a large and well conducted county newspaper, two large two story brick school houses, common and select schools, fifteen dry goods stores, two extensive hardware establishments, three drug stores, three stove and tin-ware establishments, two saddle and harness making shops, two wholesale and eighteen retail groceries, six produce warehouses, hat, cap, boot and shoe dealers and manufacturers, cabinet makers, chair makers, blacksmiths, gun smiths, hotels, livery stables, &c. It is one of the best points for business in this part of Indiana, and there is no doubt would well repay the establishing of a large foundry and machine shop. There are two permanent daguerrean galleries, three ministers, eight physicians, and twelve lawyers. The Indianapolis, Pittsburg, and Cleveland Railroad passes close to the south side of the town, having at this point good passenger and freight depots, engine houses, &c. There is more grain shipped from this station than from any other on the line of that railroad between Indianapolis and Cleveland.

The country around is well adapted to the growth of all the various kinds of grain and grass, more especially wheat and grass, and is rapidly filling up with large, well improved, and well stocked farms, fine dwellings and large and convenient barns, with all the other indications of prosperous, energetic and wealthy farmers.

The situation of the town is healthy and pleasant. In the south-west part of the town, there are three large mounds of gravel, which, whether natural, or made by the aborigines, would be a curious study for the antiquarian. Skeletons of members of the human race, whether Indian or otherwise, have been unearthed from those mounds, frequently in a good state of preservation.

NEW ALBANY,

A flourishing city, and the county seat of Floyd county, on the Ohio river, one mile below the Falls, three miles below Louisville, and immediately opposite Portland, Kentucky, and 136 miles below Cincinnati, in latitude 38° 18' north, and longitude 85° 51' west. It is the southern terminus of the New Albany and Salem Railroad, which extends to Michigan City, on Lake Michigan, a distance of 287 miles. It was first platted by Joel Nathaniel, and Abner Scribner, and became a town on November 13th, 1816, became a city by act of General Assembly July 14, 1839, and adopted a General Act of Incorporation March 7th, 1853. It is remarkable for its rapid growth and active trade, in fact may be considered, in a manufacturing and commercial view, as about the first city in the State. Her increase, both in population and wealth, began on the completion of the New Albany and Salem Railroad, since which time her population has gradually but surely increased. New Albany is located on a high bench above overflow, except by extreme high water, such as in 1822. Then the immediate bank of the river was inundated. At the lower end of High street a spur of the knobs overlook the whole city and surrounding country. From this point the knobs recede in a north-eastern direction from the river, curving in the rear of the city and gradually retiring, they leave a scope of country ample for all the wants of a large population. On the line of State street these knobs are reached by a fine McAdamized road, at a distance of two and a half miles. The scenery from the points of these hills is grand and beautiful beyond description, and is well worthy the notice of travelers. The wide expanse of country, the winding Ohio, Jeffersonville on this side at the head of the falls, the city of Louisville above and on the other side, the broad fields behind it, with the river hills in the distance, forming a magnificent back ground to this picture, the busy city of New Albany in the fore ground, before us, and under us the intervening slopes and fields, the densely wooded glens on either side, make the view one of rare and surpassing beauty, and vast extent.

New Albany being at the foot of the falls, it was early seen that she possessed some natural advantages, in respect to the trade of the river below, which could not be held by her proud sister at the head of the falls, and on the other side of the river. And notwithstanding the many disadvantages incident to her close proximity to that wealthy and powerful city, whose shadow chilled, and perhaps stunted her growth for a time, yet she has gradually grown apace, gained strength, and developed her proportions.

As a shipping point the advantages of New Albany have long been acknowledged, and since the completion of the New Albany and Salem Railroad to Lake Michigan, that branch of business has greatly increased.

This road gives her rare advantages, possessed by no other Western city. It passes directly through the whole State, and by its connections, Northern Indiana, Michigan, and Northern Ohio can be supplied with the products of the South cheaper and sooner than by means of any other route. It also forms a main artery for carrying the products of the North to the best shipping point on the river.

By means of the Ohio and Mississippi Road, New Albany is placed in easy communication with Southern Indiana and Illinois.

New Albany has been placed in excellent communication with the back counties by means of Plank roads, several of which radiate into the interior, giving favorable opportunities for the transportation of produce at all seasons of the year. In short, having good wharves accessible to the largest steamers the greatest portion of the year, and good communication with a large extent of country, New Albany must greatly increase her business in the shipping line. She is eminently possessed of all the advantages requisite for a large and commercial city.

This city has a large trade in its mercantile department, having several large and extensive wholesale establishments of dry goods, doing business, annually, of nearly $1,000,000; wholesale grocers about the same amount; queensware and cutlery sales to the amount of $200,000 annually; hardware sales $250,000 annually; saddlery hardware $60,000 annually; drugs and medicines $200,000 annually; clothing $100,000; boots and shoes $100,000; fancy goods $125,000; carpets and house furnishing goods $75,000; hats and caps $40,000; hides and leather $110,000; jewelry and watches $60,000; wholesale produce and commission $300,000; wines and liquors $130,000; salt $30,000.

The retail trade of the city is large and active, and almost exclusively for cash.

Steam boat building is carried on extensively. The business has greatly increased up to the present time.

There are at present in New Albany five ship yards. There are three large foundries which not only furnish the engines of boats built here, but they also furnish engines for many of the boats built at Louisville, Jeffersonville, and other points. Of cabin builders there are several firms, all of whom are doing a flourishing business. There are also brass founders, steamboat blacksmiths, riggers, wheel and block makers, yard makers, and all the several branches of trade which are necessary to fit out a boat complete.

This city has three large iron foundries, with machine shops attached. These foundries and machine shops, taken in connection with the boat building so extensively carried on here, have done much to add to the permanent prosperity and growth of the city. There is also a large foundry and machine shop connected with the New Albany and Salem Railroad. The amount annually disbursed by the Railroad company in this department, is about $160,000. Also straw cutters, several furniture and cabinet manufactories and ware rooms, three large flouring mills, a half bushel measure factory, an extensive factory of plows, harrows, cultivators, hay rakes, corn shellers, wheelbarrows, carts and wagons, a whetstone manufactory, a cement factory, tobacco factory, soap and candle factory, stone ware, and several establishments for manufacturing clothing, hats and caps, boots and shoes, saddles and harness, tin ware, copper ware, blank books, brushes, laths, doors, sash and blinds, working in the the aggregate, a large number of hands and employing a large amount of capital.

New Albany is healthy, and has the very best of drinking water. The streets are well paved, kept clean and in good repair. The whole length of paved streets and alleys reach over twenty-two miles, a greater extent of paved streets than any city in the State. The city is well lighted with gas.

The number of churches in this city is as follows: Methodist 8, Presbyterian 4, Baptist 2, Episcopalian 1, Lutheran 1, Disciples 1, United Brethren 1, Christian 1, Roman Catholic 2.—Whole number 21.

The public school plan of the city embodies a well matured graded system. Uppermost in the grade stands the "Scribner High School." The plan of operations designates "two regular courses of study. 1st. The English course, which comprehends all the English and mathematical branches. 2d. The classical course, which, in addition to the above, includes the study of the ancient languages."

The subordinate schools consist of four grammar departments, (two principal and two assistant,) nine departments for secondary pupils, and an equal number for primary.

The school buildings, five in number, are all large and well ventilated. The teachers are selected with the utmost care, solely upon their own merits and qualifications. The schools are under the control of a Board of Trustees, elected by the people.

The "Indiana Asbury Female College" is finely located in the upper part of the city, and is in a flourishing condition. It is under the care of the Indiana Conference of the M. E. Church.

The "New Albany Collegiate Institute" is an excellent school, for boys only. A limited number of pupils are taken.

These various institutions of learning are all conducted in such a manner as to render them not only a great credit, but a vast benefit to the city. In addition there are quite a number of private schools, principally for the younger portion of children, which are well conducted and liberally supported.

Population 18,000.

NEW HARMONY.

A town in Posey county, on the Wabash river, 60 miles above its mouth, and 15 miles north of Mount Vernon. New Harmony was settled by George Rapp, who came to America from Germany, with a number of his associates, and founded a colony and built a town in Pennsylvania. They came to the Wabash in 1814, built the town of New Harmony, cleared a large tract of land, built about 150 houses, planted orchards and vineyards, erected mills and manufactories of various kinds, and made the wilderness blossom like the rose. In 1825, Robert Owen purchased of Mr. Rapp, the town of New Harmony and a tract of land embracing the town, containing twenty-five thousand acres, for the purpose of trying an experiment of his social system; which resulted in a total failure. Mr. Rapp, with his associates, returned to Pennsylvania, settled on the Ohio river, 30 miles below Pittsburgh, and built the town of Economy, where the society still exists under their original compact; and since the death of Mr. Rapp, are directed by nine trustees, who are chosen by the society. Soon after the purchase of New Harmony by Mr. Owen, he sold to Mr. William McClure, about half of the town of New Harmony; and subsequently Mr. McClure purchased of Mr. Rapp seven thousand acres of land in the vicinity of New Harmony, for the purpose of establishing a School of Industry. The School was established, and after an experiment of six or seven years, and an expenditure of upwards of twenty thousand dollars, was abandoned. Mr. McClure introduced into his School at New Harmony, several natives of South America, who, after learning our language, returned to their native country. Mr. McClure went to Mexico, where he remained until his death. He left a will bequeathing his large estate, including his interest in the town of New Harmony, to working men, to be disbursed in sums of five hundred dollars, for the purpose of establishing libraries. After the failure of Mr. McClure's school system, and Mr. McClure's School of Industry, the town of New Harmony continued to decline for several years; but since the town and lands in the vicinity of New Harmony have passed into the hands of individuals, the town is beginning to improve. The public buildings are a Methodist and one Episcopal church, a Working Men's Institute, a commodious School House, the Union Hall used chiefly for a theater. The town contains a weekly newspaper, three libraries, seven stores, three steam mills, two large distilleries, and last year exported one million nine hundred thousand pounds of pork, six thousand barrels of whisky, twenty thousand bushels of wheat, one hundred and fifty thousand bushels of corn, and six hundred head of cattle. NORTH MADISON,

Formerly known as Mount Pleasant, is a post village of Jefferson county, situated about two miles north of the city of Madison and the Ohio river, at an elevation of nearly 150 feet above low water, and is accessible by both wagon and railroad, the first taking a circuitous route around the mountain side, while the railway takes an air-line through deep cuts and over dismal ravines, which cannot fail to excite in the breast of travelers feelings of awe and admiration. The ascent of the train is aided by the introduction of cog-work between the rails, which connects with the engine, making the ascent with a loaded train, with seemingly the same ease as they do the descent, which is accomplished by the application of the breaks, dispensing with the engine altogether.

The location of North Madison is healthy, the scenery is beautiful, and the surrounding country is very fertile and well settled with industrious and wealthy farmers. The village contains five churches, one academy, one steam saw mill, three dry goods stores, two groceries, one drug store, and one shoe store, besides several other similar enterprises. RICHMOND,

Is a thriving, industrious and respectable city, situated on the Indiana Central Railway, on the east side of the East Fork of Whitewater, in Wayne county, about 41 miles from the State line. It was first called Smithville, after the original proprietor; but the name not giving general satisfaction, was afterwards changed to Richmond. In 1800 Indiana Territory did not contain more than 5,000 inhabitants, and consisted of but three counties; namely, Knox, Wayne and St. Clair. Knox county covered most of our present State of Indiana. Wayne county included the principal part of Michigan, and St. Clair county embraced the present State of Illinois. As the population of the Territory increased, the limits of the several counties were contracted, and other counties formed by the Legislature, which organized in Wayne county in 1810. The first court held in this county was on the 25th of February, 1811, at the house of Richard Rue, three miles from Richmond. The Commissioners were then appointed and ordered to meet and locate the county seat. They determined the permanent seat of justice should be on the donation of Samuel Woods, of 65 acres, township 13, 3d range, with a small reserve. The Court, after confirming the report, ordered that the town of Salisbury, the first town laid out in Wayne county, should be the county seat. But in 1816 the Legislature ordered that the seat of justice should be moved to its present locality, which is Centreville, 6 miles west of Richmond. In 1815 it constituted one of the thirteen counties into which Indiana was then divided. Its population at that time was 6,200. Five other counties exceeded it in the number of their inhabitants. The whole population of Indiana Territory in 1815 did not reach 70,000.

Richmond has the reputation of being one of the healthiest places in the State, is in a fine neighborhood, in one of the best counties in the State, environed by rich lands, having in abundance the best water the State affords, the air salubrious, and its elevated situation commands extensive and beautiful prospects.

Richmond is noted for its many manufactures, having many good natural advantages over a great many other points in the several streams in the vicinity of the city, affording abundant hydraulic power sufficient for the heaviest kinds of machinery. Not only does the main stream at this place afford several mill privileges, but the three branches just north of the city called the East, West and Middle forks, furnish each excellent water power. Richmond is lighted with gas on all the principal streets. It has now in its vicinity twenty-two flouring mills and twenty-four saw mills, one oil mill, two paper mills, and a number of woolen factories. It has two large brick houses, several stories high, devoted to boarding school purposes; the larger one is owned by the orthodox Friends, and the other is private property; both are within a mile and a half of Richmond, the one west and the other south of the city. It has, also, good public schools, several extensive nurseries and horticultural establishments, two sash, door and blind manufactories and planing mills, a cutlery manufactory, one soap and candle factory, one brewery, three foundries, two or three coal yards and machine shops, manufacturers of agricultural implements, three carriage manufacturers, wagon shops, &c., &c.

Among the public buildings there is erected on Fifth street a district school house seventy-one feet long by sixty-one feet wide and forty feet in height, costing about $14,000, erected in 1854. The Starr Hall, owned by James M. Starr, is ninety-five feet long, forty-six feet wide and three stories high, built at an expense of $10,000. The public square consists of one acre of ground, enclosed and partly shaded with trees; it is the gift of John Smith, of Richmond. The city has three fire, hook and ladder companies, three banks, namely, "Branch of Indiana State Bank," the "Citizens' Bank," and the "People's Bank."

The amount of personal property in Richmond in 1857 was $1,152,234; the amount of real estate, $1,528,820; value of additional improvements, $253,440; amount of manufactured articles, $906,531; total, $3,841,025.

It also contains fourteen dry goods stores, four hardware stores, twenty-five groceries, four harness and saddle shops, two hat and cap stores, three furniture stores, two cabinet shops, twelve blacksmith shops, one crockery store, five jewelry stores, boot and shoe stores, six millinery shops, two marble halls, one tannery, two pork packing establishments, five bakeries, one gunsmith, five newspapers, the Palladium, the Broad Axe, the Jeffersonian, the Vanguard, and the Lilly.

The first settlers opened a road in the fall of 1806, to the vicinity where Paris (Preble county, Ohio) now stands. This was the beginning of the route to Cincinnati; in the course of the summer 1807, however, the pioneers established a nearer route, running to Eaton, on Wayne's Trace, which led to Hamilton. It was considered then a great advance in her intercourse with the world, when in 1847, '48, a four and six horse omnibus connected the town with Cincinnati. In 1824, Richmond contained 453 inhabitants, and Cincinnati was the chief market; the wagon was loaded up with the produce of the country—linsey-woolsey, tow-linen, flax-linen, beeswax, beans, ginseng, feathers, rags, lard, sugar, butter, hogs, flour, etc., and from two to three days were spent in getting to the city, and as many in returning, which often caused the merchant to curtail his sales for want of goods, while the ardent-looking-for wagon would sometimes not arrive for three weeks. Still Richmond continued slowly to improve, and in 1826, its population was 648; in the year 1827, it reached 716, and in 1828, it numbered 824. Richmond contains extensive manufactories of broad cloths, blankets, satinets, cotton, etc. etc., and she has every commercial advantage enjoyed by any other city in the state, having the advantages of the several lines of railroads passing through and in addition, having good turnpike roads running in all feasible directions through the country in every conceivable point of the compass, giving a ready access to a large scope of the country, and facilitating the ingress of a large travel and trade to the city. The total number of votes polled in Wayne county at the last Presidential election in 1856, were 5,756, Wayne township voting 1,681. An entire system of grading draining and paving, was commenced in 1848, on Front street, and has been prosecuted annually to the present time, giving to this town a more city-like appearance and conducing to the healthiness of the place. This place contains ten churches, one Methodist, two German-Lutherans, two Friends, one Presbyterian, one Catholic, one Episcopal, one American Lutheran, and one Secedar church. The churches are all neat and comfortable. It also has three first class hotels. Few cities possess the elements to the building up of a large manufacturing and commercial city more extensively than Richmond. Here the Cincinnati and Chicago railroad intersects the Indiana Central and Dayton and Western railway, 40 miles from Dayton, Ohio, and 68 miles from Indianapolis. The line of the Richmond and Fort Wayne railroad is now in course of construction. Population 12,000.

RISING SUN,

The county seat of Ohio county, is beautifully situated on the Ohio River, 35 miles from Cincinnati. It was laid out in 1814 by John James. Many of the earliest settlers of the place still reside here. The first newspaper ever published here was called the Rising Sun, by Isaac Stevens & Co., and the first number was issued on the 16th day of November, 1833. Population about 2,200. The principal public buildings are the public school building, capable of accommodating 700 pupils, the court house and jail. The South eastern Indiana Female Seminary is located here. The Weekly Visitor is the only paper published here. The principal manufactures and productive establishments are a woolen factory, iron foundry, plow factory, flouring mill, distillery, saw mill, chair factory, two furniture manufactures, two bakeries, six boot and shoe and four tailoring establishments. Of other business houses there are four dry goods and six grocery stores, one drug store, one hat store, three jewelry establishments, one hotel. There are five churches, two Presbyterian, one Methodist, one Reform Baptist and one Universalist church. This place has an extensive river trade and annually sends large quantities of produce to the South. The dry good and variety store of Messrs. Hathaway & Co., was established by S. Hathaway in 1822, and is one of the most extensive business houses of the kind in the West, and embraces the most complete variety of all kinds of goods ever collected in one house. It is, also, the office of the Rising Sun Insurance Company, and of the Lawrenceburg and Rising Sun Telegraph line. The flouring mill of J. W. Talbott, the woolen factory of I. Scofield, and the distillery of E. H. Wright, each do a heavy business. Rising Sun has, also, the reputation of being the most healthy town on the Ohio River.

SOUTH BEND,

South Bend, the county seat of St. Joseph county, is a flourishing town containing about four thousand inhabitants. It was laid out in the year 1831. It is beautifully situated on the west bank of the St. Joseph river, at its most southern point, from which place the stream bending northward flows to the State of Michigan, six miles distant. The place takes its name from its location. The streets are wide, intersecting at right angles. The site is elevated, and the place has a high character for salubrity.

The Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad runs through South Bend, which is 85 miles distant from Chicago, its western terminus. This is one of the principal stations on the railroad, and a very large amount of produce, lumber and manufactured articles is shipped at this point. The St. Joseph river is navigable by small steamboats from its mouth to Constantine, which is above this place.

The South Bend Manufacturing Company, organized under an act of the Legislature passed Dec. 23, 1842, at a cost of $35,000 has erected a dam across the St. Joseph at this point, creating a vast water power, unsurpassed in this part of the State. There are now in constant operation twenty-nine water wheels, using on an average three hundred inches of water, each under a head of seven feet, yet at the lowest stage of the river not one-half of the water is used.

For all kinds of manufacturing business the greatest advantages are here afforded. There are two large flouring mills, making $250,000 worth of flour and meal annually, several extensive furniture manufactories, a furnace, sash and blind shop, chair shop, machine shop, saw mills, and many other establishments of a similar character. A large amount of the oak, cherry, maple and black walnut lumber, which is abundantly produced in the vicinity, is here cut up into the requisite form and shape for furniture or agricultural implements, and shipped to different markets in an undressed state.

The court house is built of cut Athens stone, at a cost of $40,000, and is one of the finest buildings of the kind in the State. The St. Joseph Hotel, a large and commodious building, was erected in 1856 at an equal cost.

The town contains about thirty stores, many of them doing an extensive business, besides a large number of smaller shops and groceries. There are here six churches, and fine school houses are in course of erection. A Branch of the Bank of the State of Indiana here located has a fine banking house, built in the Grecian style.

Business of all kinds is active, and the population and wealth of the place are rapidly increasing.

The University of Notre Dame, an extensive Roman Catholic Seminary, is situated about one mile north-east of South Bend, finely located on the borders of a small lake. St. Mary's Academy, an establishment designed solely for the education of females, in connection, however, with the University of Notre Dame, is located on the banks of the St. Joseph, about one mile north of South Bend.

Laurel, a suburb east of the St. Joseph River, is connected with the town by two bridges which here span the river.

The town is incorporated, and the following are the municipal officers:

Trustees—Henry Carlton, Esq., Pres't; Henry Finly, Thomas S. Stanfield, E. P. Taylor, Jesse L. Walterhouse.

Clerk—DANIEL MATTHEWS.

Treasurer—DANIEL DAYTON.

SULLIVAN,

The county seat of Sullivan county, was laid out in 1842, and for a number of years its progress was but slight. The location of the Evansville and Crawfordsville Railroad past the town has given it an impetus destined to make it one of the first inland towns in the State. The town is situated on rolling ground, and for health is unsurpassed. Being near the center of the county its business is fast increasing. The merchants are doing a good business and are all on a safe foundation. Two steam saw mills and one flouring mill are in constant operation, but still are unable to supply the demand made on them. Sullivan is situated about 26 miles south-east of Terre Haute and 100 miles south-west of Indianapolis. Besides the county buildings there are two churches erected and one erecting, one large seminary building and a large number of brick buildings in course of erection. It is the most important point on the Evansville and Crawfordsville Railroad, between Evansville and Terre Haute. Population 1000.

TERRE HAUTE.

The beautiful city of Terre Haute is situated upon a high, level plateau, on the east bank of the Wabash River, in Vigo county, Indiana. The site is remarkably level and beautiful, and, in this respect, is not, perhaps, surpassed by any place in the Western country. The streets are rectangular, and, with the points of the compass, wide, spacious, clean, and generally ornamented with fine shade trees, and lighted with gas. The city lies upon the western margin of Fort Harrison Prairie, and from its peculiarity of location many years ago received the sobriquet of the "Prairie City," by which it is now generally known.

The town of Terre Haute was laid out by a company of individuals in 1816, and its name is composed of two French words, signifying "high land," which was doubtless suggested by some of the old French traders of the Valley. Nor is it inappropriate, the level of the city being some fifty feet above the low water flow of the river.

The first sales of lots were made in the fall of 1816.

In January, 1818, Vigo county was organized, and in the March following Terre Haute was selected as the county seat. This was the first upward impulse it received. To show how important the company considered its selection as the county seat, may be inferred from the amount of lots and cash they paid the Commissioners therefor. In consideration of the location, the company conveyed 80 lots, and the public square of eight lots, to the County Commissioners, and paid into the treasury, in cash and mortgage bonds, $4,000.

The years 1819, 1820 and 1821, were noted throughout the Wabash Valley for the general sickness which prevailed. These years are well remembered by the few old inhabitants who now remain. The town, in common with others throughout the Valley, suffered much. This for some time retarded its prosperity and that of the surrounding country. During the four years succeeding 1820, many of those who have since been among its most enterprising and prominent citizens, arrived. There are many pleasing incidents connected with the first settlement and subsequent growth of the city, allusion to which, the space allotted to this sketch will not permit. From 1820 to 1850, the place has continued with a steady but a slow increase. Since 1850 it has more than doubled in population and importance, and the better class of its buildings have been erected.

The present population of Terre Haute is between ten and eleven thousand, and is steadily increasing. There has been, however, no accurate census taken for some years past. The population, as shown by the general census of the United States in 1850, was 4,051; in 1854, an enumeration exhibited a population of 7,000. In point of intelligence, energy and business character, its citizens will compare favorably with any others of the State. Nearly all the property of the city is owned by actual residents, and it is a significant mark of the thrift of the citizens that almost every household is also a free holder and owns a residence.

Its healthfulness is not equaled by any place of its size, as is shown by its mortality statistics, published monthly by the municipal authorities. The soil on which the city stands is a rich, porous loam, insuring speedy drainage, and overlies a basin of fine limestone water, furnishing at all points an unfailing supply to its wells. The public buildings, business houses and dwellings are beautiful, and many of them equal to those of any city. There is a great degree of taste and elegance displayed in the grounds, shrubbery and lawns surrounding the private dwellings. In this respect, perhaps, Terre Haute has not an equal in the State. In the early settlement of the place great attention was paid to the planting of shade trees on the margins of the streets and throughout the public grounds.

It is one of the most accessible points in the state. The Wabash river is navigable a portion of the year for steamboats of the largest class. During its navigation, steamers load from any of the Ohio or Mississippi ports direct for this place. It is connected with lake Erie and the Ohio river by the Wabash and Erie canal. The Terre Haute and Richmond railroad furnishes a direct communication with all the roads centering at Indianapolis. The Terre Haute, Alton and St. Louis railroad, passing through the fertile prairies of Illinois, gives a direct communication with the Mississippi at both Alton and St. Louis. The National Road passes through the city. The bridge and other improvements of the Terre Haute Draw Bridge Company, on which the principal one is the "bottom road," being a fine and substantial road thrown up several feet above high water mark, and running entirely across the "bottoms," thereby insuring communication at all times with the Illinois trade. Good wagon roads extend from the city to all surrounding parts of the country, and its environs furnish as charming drives as can be found in the western country. Terre Haute has always been noted for the amount of its mercantile trade. For many years it has furnished a very large market for merchandize of every kind, and has been conspicuous for the number, probity, wealth and energy of its merchants as a class. The amount of merchandize of all kinds retailed in the city, has doubtless reached, for five years past, the annual average of $1,000,000. The banks of the city are three in number, representing a capital of $500,000. In addition to these chartered banks, there are two large private banking houses, owned by Messrs. McKeen & Tousey, and Watson & Co.

The principal trade of Terre Haute, so far as amount of investment is concerned, has been in the article of pork. The annual number of hogs packed in this city during ten years past, has been as follows:

Years.	No. Hogs.	Years.	No. Hogs.
1848.....	54,750	1853.....	78,809
1849.....	61,066	1854.....	69,979
1850.....	70,548	1855.....	48,562
1851.....	66,851	1856.....	49,150
1852.....	108,791	1857.....	49,151

Terre Haute offers great inducements for all kinds of manufacturing business; fuel and labor are cheap and abundant. It is surrounded by extensive coal fields; good quarries of building stone lie near; iron ores of superior quality are in close proximity, and with every facility for transportation by canal, river and railroad.

There are published in the city, three daily and weekly newspapers, sustained by a liberal circulation and patronage.

The Educational facilities of Terre Haute are good, and rapidly increasing. There are now owned by the city, four large and commodious brick buildings devoted to Public Schools. Two of these buildings are perhaps the largest and most convenient in the state devoted to similar purposes. In addition to these, there are many private schools which are commanding a good patronage. Among the latter now in operation, may be noted St. Vincent's Academy for girls, under the control of the Sisters of Providence of St. Mary's. The new Female College is now completed, and is the most elegant and complete Female College in the west.

Nearly every religious creed is represented in Terre Haute. Some of its churches are very spacious and beautiful. The various churches are well attended and prosperous.

In every point of view, and to every class, Terre Haute offers peculiar advantages as a place of residence. Its location is not surpassed in beauty or healthfulness. Its business is large, population active, enterprising and liberal. There is, in proportion to the size of the city, a larger amount of actual capital than is usual in the west. Among the citizens are quite a number distinguished for their large wealth. There is, in the city, as polite and refined society as may be found in the west. In the various professions, there is a baker's dozen of talent, and some of the professional men of the city occupy the foremost ranks of their calling in the State.

The future prospects of the city are flattering. With a continuance of the steady increase even of the four years past, it will soon become a place of importance. If there be a speedy impulse given to its manufacturing interests by the attraction of capital from abroad, and a diversion of a portion of its present capital from other channels into manufacturing, it must eventually become a large inland point. For such an end nature has done everything desirable in regard to location, and the future of Terre Haute is foretold by the exhaustless mines of coal, the heavy growth of the best of timber, near to, and in every direction from the city, and the superior facilities for the transportation of every product by canal, river and railroad.

The original plat being 160 acres of the south east quarter of section thirty-five, township twenty north, of range two west. It was once one of the oldest and largest Indian towns in the center of the Thorntown or Ten Mile Reservation, first settled by the whites in 1830. The grounds in the neighborhood were a favorite resort for the Indian hunter. There are yet remaining in their primitive state several Indian burying grounds in the vicinity. About 1812, there were several French trading houses established at this place. The first justices of the peace were Benjamin Sweney and James Van Eaton. The first merchant and post master was a Mr. Baldridge. The first attorney at law was Rufus A. Lockwood; and first hotel keeper, Isaac Morgan. It contains four churches, two Presbyterian, one Methodist Episcopal, and one Christian, also an excellent academy, called the "Thorntown Academy," under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Conference, John L. Smith, president. The faculty comprise able and efficient professors and instructors. There are several private schools, well conducted and well supported. Thorntown is beautifully situated, and the surrounding scenery is delightful, there being several beautiful groves in the vicinity. It has several stores of various kinds, two hotels, two or three flouring and saw mills, one tannery, two grain and produce ware houses. A large quantity of grain and produce is shipped from this place by railroad. There are no spirituous liquors sold at this place except strictly for mechanical or sacramental purposes. The inhabitants are a very moral and industrious people. It contains about twenty-five ministers of various denominations, and one lawyer. Population 1,500.

UNION CITY,

Situated on the State line between Ohio and Indiana, in Wayne township, Randolph county, Indiana, extending into Jackson township, Darke county, Ohio, at the western terminus of the Bellefontaine and Indiana Railroad, the northern terminus of the Greenville and Miami Railroad, eastern terminus of the Indianapolis, Pittsburgh and Cleveland Railroad, western terminus of the Columbus, Piqua and Indiana Railroad, western terminus of the Fremont and Indiana Railroad, eastern terminus of the Marion and Mississinewa Valley Railroad, southern terminus of the Cincinnati, Union and Fort Wayne Railroads, the three former of which are in successful operation, the latter partially built, and is confidently expected to be completed and put in operation as soon as times again become propitious. The town was laid out principally by O. H. and Jer. Smith in A. D. 1851, about the date of the location of the first mentioned railroads. The completion of the railroads to this place in the early part of the year 1853 gave rise to the building of the town, which was then but a dense forest. Business and business houses sprung up in the woods, and everything bid fair at once for a city. Since which time the growth of the place has been less active but steady, and now is doing a better business than ever at any time before.

Five respectable buildings constitute the improvements of the railroad companies at present; more will be added as soon as the corporations are prepared to do it.

Five hotels are open for business, among which is the Branham House, which is not second to any house in the two States, all things considered, its location possessing superior advantages to the traveling public, either by rail or otherwise.

There is but one church edifice (Christian), another having been destroyed by fire some two years since. Several religious societies of different denominations worship at this place.

One Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, one Lodge of Independent Order of Good Templars, and one of Free and Accepted Masons, are located here and in active operation.

Five dry goods stores, three commission and produce warehouses, three family groceries (doggeries not included), one steam flouring mill, one saw mill, one iron store, two clothing stores, one drug store, one livery stable, one boot, shoe and leather store, together with a liberal share of mechanics, lawyers and doctors.

Rev. Thomas Wiley is pastor of the First Christian church; Rev. M. H. Mendenhall, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church. Population from 1,200 to 1,500.

The town is especially noted for health, being situated on the summit between Columbus, Ohio, and Indianapolis, Ind. Rain falling upon the town plat runs off three directions, to Greenville creek, Stillwater and the Mississinewa river, respectively.

The country around is rather level, and portions of it newly settled—a fair grain growing country, but is more particularly adapted to grass. Agriculture is receiving a liberal share of interest. Good farms average in price about $25 per acre. Union commands the trade from 20 to 30 miles north, from 10 to 15 south, with less east and west. The advantages of this place will increase as the agricultural interests become developed.

VEVAY,

The county seat of Switzerland county, situated on the Ohio River, equidistant between Cincinnati and Louisville, Ky. It was laid out in the year 1813, by John Francis Denfour and Daniel Denfour, emigrants from the Canton De Vend, in Switzerland, Europe, and in remembrance of their native town gave it its present name. The town is laid out on part of the land which was entered by John James Denfour and his associates, in the beginning of the present century, and on which an extended credit was given, by an act of Congress, with a view of encouraging the culture of the grape. The commerce of the town is confined chiefly to the shipping of produce to the southern markets, and is the point on the Ohio River to which most of the produce of the county is brought for shipment. It is remarkable that, as yet, there has never a case of cholera originated in the town. Many attribute that fact to the water used by the inhabitants—it being altogether cistern water that is used. It is a very healthy location. There are at present a Methodist, Baptist and New School Presbyterian church. The Catholics also have a small church started recently, which begins to increase in number. As yet they have no house of public worship, having rented for the time being a house for a chapel, but contemplate building a fine church. The Reformers have a congregation but no house of worship yet built. There is at present a very good school in the town under the superintendence of the Rev. F. D. Bland. Population about 1,500.

VICTOR,

A post office of DeKalb county.

VIENNA,

A post office of Scott county, situated on the Jeffersonville and Columbus Railroad, eight miles west of Lexington the county seat.

VINCENNES.

Vincennes is situated on the east bank of the Wabash river, about 150 miles above its confluence with the Ohio, and is 190 miles west of Cincinnati, and 149 east of St. Louis. The plain on which the town stands was originally a fine scope of prairie, above the highest floods, and sufficiently undulating to carry off all surplus water. On this prairie, underneath a rich soil of from one foot to eighteen inches, lies a stratum of gravel from five to ten feet thick. This gravel is one of the best materials in the world for grading roads, streets, walks, etc., affording a smooth solid surface, but little if any inferior to the most expensive pavements. This stratum of gravel also serves as an underdrain, carrying off, in a very short time, all pools of water which may be found on the surface, and leaving the streets dry and clear in a few hours after the most protracted rains. The best and finest limestone water is found at a depth of from twenty-five to fifty feet.

Vincennes was first settled by the French, who, according to Judge Law, (who has devoted a great deal of research to the early history of the place, as well as the north-west,) established a trading or military post here about 1710 or 1711, under Captain Morgan de Vincenne. The "Post," with the whole north-west territory, remained in the possession of the French until the treaty of peace between that Government and England in 1763, soon after which the authority of the British crown was extended over it. It continued to be a part of the British possessions when the war of Independence was declared. It was, if possible, to overthrow the dominion of the mother country in the north-west, that Thomas Jefferson, then Governor of the State of Virginia, conceived the plan of a military expedition to Kaskaskia and the Upper Mississippi. The execution of the plan was entrusted to Colonel (afterwards General,) George Rogers Clarke, who faithfully carried it out against obstacles and through difficulties that would have been sufficient to discourage one with less courage than Julius Caesar. History records no campaign undertaken with so small a number of men and such an inadequacy of means, the results of which have been more glorious.

General Clarke captured Vincennes from the British on the 24th of February, 1779, and with the fall of Vincennes, Virginia acquired the country then known as the north-west territory, which she ceded to the general Government in 1789. No other spot, outside of the original thirteen States, is believed to be so rich in historical interest, as the "Old Post." [See Judge Law's Colonial History of Vincennes.]

Vincennes continued to be the capital town of the Indiana territory until the organization of the State of Indiana, when it became necessary that the chief officers should take up a more central residence. Very little progress was made toward the improvement of Vincennes, after the removal of the capitol, until about 1850. Several schemes were started during the inflation of 1836, but none of them were attended with any substantial results. During the last eight years her citizens have become aroused to the great advantages by which they are surrounded, and have expended, it is believed, more money in public enterprises, in proportion to their wealth, than any other city of the same number of inhabitants in the State. It was through the enterprise of her citizens that the navigation of the Wabash River has been improved; it is to her citizens that the country owes the successful elaboration of the idea of a direct railroad between Cincinnati and St. Louis. Her citizens also contributed liberally to the construction of the Evansville and Terre Haute Railroad, and have expended nearly fifty thousand dollars in constructing plank roads. In addition to the railways above mentioned two other important line are in process of construction: 1st. The Illinois Southern Railroad. 2d. The Wabash Railroad, connecting Vincennes via Paris, with the whole network of railroad throughout northern Illinois. The means for completing these latter roads are already provided. Vincennes also enjoys telegraphic communication with all points. This revival of public spirit is beginning to tell with wonderful effect upon the growth and prosperity of the town. In 1855, the population of Vincennes was less than three thousand souls, and now, three years later, it is, according to the best estimates based upon reliable data, about 8,000. The value of her taxable property, both real and personal, has increased in about the same ratio. Many important public improvements are now in progress, among them a first class wagon bridge across the river, extensive gas works, and a fine building for graded or high schools. The facts and figures warrant the belief that the growth of Vincennes is not attributed to spasmodic speculation, but rests upon a substantial basis of agricultural wealth, mechanical skill and energy and enterprise of her citizens.

The place at present contains eight churches, Catholic church, French and American; Catholic church, German; Presbyterian, Old School; Methodist Episcopal, Protestant Episcopal; Christian, German Lutheran, and Methodist (colored.)

The educational advantages of Vincennes are hardly surpassed by those of any other city in the state. The Vincennes University, an institution incorporated by act of Congress and liberally endowed by a grant of public lands, after having been embarrassed by the state's usurpation of her fund, which was only recovered by a tedious law suit protracted for a long term of years, is now rapidly rising to a high position among the best educational establishments in the country. In the several departments there are at present one hundred and twenty-five students, under the care of an able and accomplished corps of teachers. The Catholic church maintains a theological seminary in the immediate vicinity of the town, where many men are fitted for the ministry of the Catholic church. They also have a first class female seminary here, under the charge of the Sisters of Providence, in which all branches of female education are taught. The common schools are kept open free to all, for six months in the year; and while they are closed, there are usually three or four select schools kept up. The school trustees are about erecting a fine building to be used a graded or high school.

The city government is organized under the general law for the incorporation of cities, and is efficiently administered. There are two well organized fire companies and a hook and ladder company, all well furnished with the best engines and apparatus. The other civic associations comprise Masonic Lodge, Chapter and Council; Odd Fellows' Lodge and Encampment; Working Men's Institute, with a good library attached; Vincennes Historical and Antiquarian Society, with a cabinet; Vincennes Library Association, incorporated in 1809, with a library of 2,000 volumes; and Young Men's Monumental Association.

The city supports two papers: The Gazette, daily, tri-weekly, and weekly, owned and conducted by Harvey Mason & Co.; The Sun, semi-weekly and weekly, established in 1806, by Elihu Stout, the present county recorder, and owned and edited at present by Geo. C. Greene.

The largest branch of trade is the produce business. Large quantities of pork are packed here annually for Pittsburgh, Boston, and the New Orleans market. The beef trade is one that is just beginning to attract the attention of business men. The facilities for shipping by railroad and river, give the town superior advantages as a flour and grain market, immense quantities of which are annually bought here and shipped to Cincinnati, St. Louis and Louisville.

The manufactures of Vincennes include flour, whisky, cooperage, shingles, doors, sash, blinds, cabinet ware, plows, carriages, wagons, boots, shoes, clothing, hats, etc., a large proportion of which enters into the jobbing trade. The Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company have just built large machine shops here, in which are constantly employed from fifty to one hundred mechanics and laborers. Messrs. Hasselbach, Wright & Co., have lately erected a mammoth flouring mill and distillery here.

The wholesale grocery and dry goods trade of the city are rapidly increasing; and as an evidence of the solid basis on which the business men of Vincennes conduct their affairs, it may be mentioned that during the fearful crisis of 1857, there was not a single suspension or failure among them.

There are two banks in the place, a Branch of the Bank of the State, with a capital of $250,000, and the Bank of Vincennes, organized under the Free Banking law, with a capital of $100,000.

Few points ever presented more solid inducements to capitalists, mechanics, and men of enterprise of all classes, than does the flourishing city of Vincennes at the present time.

WABASH,

The county seat of Wabash county, is located near the center of the county, on the Wabash and Erie Canal, the Wabash River, and the Toledo, Wabash and Western Railroad, giving it very superior opportunities for travel, and for transportation. Its location is high, healthy and beautiful. Abundance of stone for building purposes, and flagging for the improvement of its streets, are found but a few feet below the surface of the earth, and extending for some miles along the brow of the bluff, on which the town is chiefly built.

It contains one bank, one woolen factory, two hotels, two drug stores, two hardware, two stove and tin, two shoe stores, two merchant tailor establishments, one clothing store, two furniture stores, eight groceries and provision stores, (only two of which keep liquor for retail,) and eleven dry goods stores, besides quite a variety of manufacturing shops. It has also five large warehouses on the canal, four church edifices—one Methodist, one Baptist, and two Presbyterian. There has also been erected, by the town, the present season, a fine public Union School House, 70 feet by 90, and three stories high. The Railroad Company have a depot and a large warehouse in the town. A plank road runs north toward Eel River till it strikes sandy and good lands, eight miles, and the stock is all taken for building another plank road south ten miles, to the Mississinewa. The buildings in the business part of the town are principally brick; many of them very fine ones, and its progress in wealth, improvement, educational advantages, &c., though not rapid, is steady and permanent. All who pass through admire its location, and those who stop are surprised at the business activity of the place. Population 1,500.

WARSAW,

The county seat of Kosciusko county, is situated on the southern banks of a beautiful lakelet near the geographical center of the county, and was laid out in the year 1835. For many years it had but simply a name, and labored under many disadvantages. Within a few years its prospects have been brightening, and is now looking forward to a bright future when she will rank among the fine cities west of Fort Wayne on the line of the Ft. Wayne and Chicago Railroad. The railroad passes through the southern skirts of the town. The shipments of wheat and pork during the past year alone at this depot have amounted to about $150,000. The streets of the town are all being graded, and there is in process of erection a union school house, calculated to accommodate five hundred pupils. One steam flouring mill, saw mill and foundry, comprise the present manufacturing establishments. There are three churches, Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist, also other church organizations, embracing Disciples, Universalists and United Brethren. Secret orders, Masonic, I. O. O. F. and Good Templars. Population, about 1,200.

WILLIAMSPORT,

The county seat of Warren county, is situated on the right bank of the Wabash river, about a mile from the Toledo, Wabash and Western Railroad. This town was laid out in 1828, and prior to the building of the T., W. & W. R. R. was accessible only by river, which was the only means of transporting its products. The railroad has however diverted the trade into another channel, leaving several fine warehouses on the river's bank, unoccupied and crumbling into decay.

The chief business formerly carried on here is fast being removed to the railroad depot, rendering the old town somewhat deserted and rather dilapidated in appearance. There are however several fine buildings, among which may be mentioned the court house and jail, churches and seminary.

Among the matters of interest and romance within and about Williamsport is the Wabash river, with its beautiful scenery, innumerable hills, and valleys covered with sylvan groves, thickly entwined in places with a luxuriant growth of the wild grape. A fine sulphur spring in the vicinity, whose waters are highly prized for their medicinal qualities, is a place of general resort. The Williamsport Falls, about three-fourths of a mile from the town, and near the T., W. & W. Railroad, are situated on an affluent of the Wabash river, known as Fall river. These falls, which are about 70 feet, afford at high water a miniature representation of the far-famed cataract of Niagara. The stream breaks here over a precipice of solid rock, somewhat in the form of a horseshoe, and being about one hundred feet wide. The stream, however, seldom attains this width. The cavern or valley into which this stream falls is about 100 feet wide at the bottom, with a small stream of water running through it, and interspersed with huge rocks, clumps of trees, &c.; its steep sides covered in places with evergreens, while creeping cedars overhang its rugged cliffs, giving it a highly picturesque and imposing appearance.

The town of Williamsport contains one newspaper office, two fine churches, (viz., one Presbyterian and one Methodist,) a seminary, a court house and jail, one hotel, five dry goods stores, one grocery and produce store, two warehouses, one chair factory, two wagon shops, two carpenter shops, one drug store, one saddle and harness shop, two boot and shoe stores, one bakery, two blacksmith shops, one clothing store, and one tailor shop. Population 500.

T I M E.

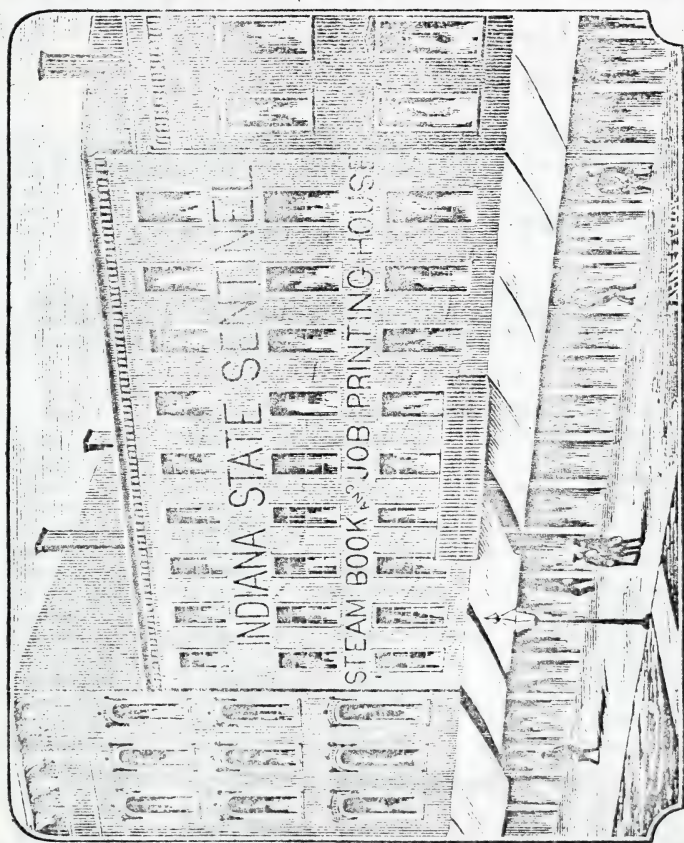

Time, the most precious of all possessions, is commonly the least prized; we know it is irrecoverable, yet throw it away wantonly. Now, the time thrown away by many people in attempting to get satisfactorily pleased with Dry Goods is marvelously great, whereas, did they but call at

THE NEW YORK Wholesale and Retail Dry Goods Store,

No. 3 Bates House, Indianapolis, Ind.,

They would be certain (in consequence of the extent and magnitude of our Stock for the Fall and Winter Trade) to get suited in a few minutes, and they would not only save Time, but a large per centage in all purchases. Try it.

MERCHANTS HOTEL

C. McKIBBEN & SON, PROPRIETORS,

North Fourth, between Market and Arch Streets,

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

THE STATE OF INDIANA,

HER SITUATION, EXTENT, TOPOGRAPHICAL CHARACTER, RIVERS
RAILROADS, AGRICULTURAL AND MINERAL RESOURCES, ETC.

GEOGRAPHICAL POSITION.

The State of Indiana is situated between latitudes $37^{\circ} 51'$ and $41^{\circ} 46'$ north, and longitudes $70^{\circ} 47'$ and $110^{\circ} 00'$ west from Washington. It lies in the form of a parallelogram between the states of Ohio and Illinois, and extends from Michigan on the north, to the Ohio river on the south. Its extreme length from north to south is 276 miles, and its greatest width 176 miles; the average length however, is only 242 miles, while the average breadth is about 153 miles. Its superficial area 33,809 square miles, or 21,637,760 acres.

BOUNDARIES AND EXTENT.

According to the ordinance of Congress of April 19, 1816, Indiana is "bounded on the east by the meridian line which forms the western boundary of the state of Ohio, being a north line from the mouth of the Miami: on the south by the river Ohio, from the mouth of the great Miami to the mouth of the river Wabash; on the west by a line drawn along the middle of the Wabash from its mouth to a point where a due north line, drawn from the town of Vincennes, would last touch the north-western shore of said river, and from thence by a due north line until the same shall intersect an east and west line drawn through a point ten miles north of the southern extreme of lake Michigan, on the north by the said east and west line to beginning."

The greatest length of Indiana is near the meridian of Lafayette, while the greatest width is near the latitude of Bloomington and Greensburgh.

TOPOGRAPHICAL CHARACTER.

Near two thirds of the state is comparatively level, admitting of but little variety of appearance. There are but very few elevations which can lay any claim to the term mountain, although there are many very respectably sized hills or "knobs" along its southern boundary, which vary in height from 50 to 600 feet; and during the summer season are clothed in nature's richest livery. These knobs or hills are generally as high as the principal levels of the interior, and extend at various distances from and parallel to the courses of the river and other streams, the tributaries of the Ohio, which through countless ages having been wearing and deepening their rocky channels through the rugged cliffs, until they present in places scenes of sublime and terrific grandeur. Behind these hills a table land spreads out and forms what is termed the interior of the country. Here the scene changes. Instead of bottoms with their mighty forests, the most varied landscape appears, diversified with vast prairies, extensive groves of oak, ash, &c., with here and there large tracts covered with a heavy undergrowth of hickory, from which an extensive and important trade is sustrined in the article of hoop poles, which are one of the principal staples of southern Indiana.

NATURAL DIVISIONS.

There is such a marked difference between certain sections of the state that lie near its principal rivers and their tributaries, that they constitute its proper natural divisions.

1. The Ohio Valley, including that of the White Water, contains about 5,000 square miles, and might be properly termed the limestone region. The soil here is extremely fertile although much of it is hilly and broken with the numerous tributaries of the Ohio running in every direction. Many of these streams, which are swollen to a great height during heavy rains, show in dry weather only the trace of the torrents which disappear nearly as soon as, the storms which occasioned them. About two-thirds of this section or division is very rich and productive, while the remainder, principally the flats at the heads of the streams, is unprofitable for cultivation.

2. The White River Valley, extends from the Wabash river centrally through the state to the Ohio line, and covers about 9,000 square miles. The surface is uniformly level and covered with heavy forests, except the western portion, which consists of low, rugged hills, prairies and barrens. The entire valley is destitute of rock, and the soils throughout the region are of the most productive and profitable character.

This valley is well supplied with wholesome, never-failing streams and an abundance of water power.

3. The Wabash Valley, is much the largest and most important division, and embraces an area of a little more than 12,000 square miles, and comprises the entire scope of country bordering on the river of that name and covering about thirty counties. It is equally fertile but more broken, interspersed with small prairies and barrens or oak openings, which are also productive, except in portions of Knox, Sullivan and Clay counties, where is found considerable land that is unproductive and of little value. About 100 miles of the Wabash river, occupying the center of the valley, affords abundant water power, while both the upper and lower parts are deficient in that respect.

4. The northern part of the state is watered by the Kankakee and the two St. Joseph rivers. The soil is mostly poor and rather unfruitful, being high and sandy in places, while low swamps and marl bogs, together with small lakes and walnut forests make up the remainder. About one-half of this portion of the country is totally unfit for culture, and never can be made available for agricultural purposes.

RIVERS AND COMMERCIAL FACILITIES.

The principal navigable river in the State is the Wabash, which is traversed by steamboats of light draft, as far north as Lafayette, for the most part of the boating season. White river is next in importance, being navigable for many miles in times of high water. There are several other rivers of much importance for water power, but few of them are navigable to any great distance for any thing but flatboats, which are however, a great advantage to the farmer in the disposition of his products; but the numerous railroads which now traverse the state, have already superseded river travel and transportation, and are more eligible, reliable and profitable.

CLIMATE, SOIL AND PRODUCTS.

The climate of Indiana embraces a wide range, extending as it does over four degrees of latitude. The extreme southern portion lies in latitude $37^{\circ} 51'$, and comes within the wine-growing district, while the northern portion is in latitude $41^{\circ} 46'$ north, and is better adapted to the production of the cereal grains. The middle of the state is in about the same latitude with the center of Spain and southern Italy, though the climate will compare more favorably with that of southern Germany. In fact the whole country south of Logansport, is blest with a mild and genial climate, producing all the finer fruits in great abundance. At Indianapolis, the mercury seldom rises above 100° Fahrenheit, or falls to 15° below zero. So that it will be observed that the mean temperature is about 57° .

The climate throughout the state is quite as favorable to health, as in any of the western states. In some portions billious and intermittent fevers prevail during the latter part of summer, or during the months of August and september. Congestive and typhus fevers are sometimes fatal in winter, but consumption is comparatively a stranger in the state. The milk sickness which it is said prevails occasionally in certain sections, is regarded by many as the scourge of Indiana; but the writer after having traversed the entire state at various seasons of the year without having ever seen a single case, is inclined to the opinion of its somewhat fabulous existence, and that very little scientific exertion would point out the causes which are local, and enable them eventually to rid themselves of it entirely.

The soil throughout the state, except a small portion of the extreme north and a few barrens in the western part, is extremely rich and productive, and adapted to the culture of almost anything that the farmer may choose to plant. Corn is the great staple of the state, and is cultivated upon its light, loamy soil to better advantage than any other crop. The wheat crop however, is generally good in the northern part of the state, while in the central and southern portions, hemp, flax, sugar cane, silk, and the wine grape, might be cultivated with profit. The climate is very favorable to domestic animals, especially sheep, cattle, horses and hogs. Of the latter, it may be said that they are next in importance to the corn trade. The number of hogs driven out of the state to market amount now to about 1,000,000 per annum. There are also great numbers of cattle, horses and sheep, which bring a good price in the best markets.

EXTENT OF CULTIVATED LANDS.

Lands in the state under cultivation, amount to about 6,000,000 of acres, leaving about 15,637,760 acres in its primitive wild state, much of which is of such a character as can never be made available for agricultural purposes. Much of it however, and especially that of the counties bordering on the Ohio, is well suited to the grape culture, to which many enterprising farmers and capitalists have been of late directing their attention. Blackberries of spontaneous growth abound in profusion throughout this entire region. Much attention has of late been bestowed on the culture of the strawberry, which also yields abundantly.

SWAMP AND UNRECLAIMED LANDS.

Although there are more than a million acres of swamp lands which have hitherto been regarded as of little or no value, yet it has been clearly shown in the Prize Essay of professor R. T. Brown, in 1853, upon that subject, that the greater portion of them are susceptible of drainage at an expenditure that would amply repay the investment. We quote verbatim from the Essay embodying many valuable thoughts and suggestions on the management of swamp lands. He says: "Two circumstances may give rise to swamp lands, to wit:"

1st. Springs, or even streams of surface water, descending from the higher land, reaching a valley may lose their channels and spread over the surface of the level land, rendering large districts swampy.

2d. Summit land, which has but little surface inclination from a dead level, where the drainage is obstructed by fallen timber, accumulated leaves and other floating rubbish, or by tussocks of grass growing in the natural channels for drainage. The operation of these two causes has given to Indiana more than a million of acres that have been condemned as "swamp land," with perhaps as many more that have been sold by the general government as dry lands, from their being in small parcels and attached to tracts that were dry.

To reclaim this amount of soil and bring it into active production, is an important consideration, and one that more commends itself to us, from the fact that these lands are most generally of the best quality of soil, when rendered sufficiently dry to admit of cultivation. Nature has three manners of disposing of the water that falls on the earth; or, in other words, three methods of drying the earth. These are: 1st, evaporation; 2d, drainage; 3d, absorption.

We place evaporation first on the list, because we regard it as the great instrumentality for carrying off the redundant moisture from the earth—an agent whose efficiency in drying swamp lands has been greatly overlooked. Indeed the swampy character of much of the summit-lands of Indiana is to be referred mainly to obstructed evaporation.

Those lands have a strong, tenacious sub-soil of clay, almost if not entirely impervious to water. This cuts off most effectually all escape of moisture downward. Covered with heavy forest trees, whose leafy canopy completely excludes every ray of sunshine, while a dense undergrowth of smaller shrubbery prevents a free circulation of currents of air at the earth's surface. Thus excluded from every means of evaporation and absorption, with but an imperfect surface drainage to dispose of the water that falls on them, they cannot be otherwise than swampy.

To dry and render tillable such lands as these, the first step is to strip them bare, and expose them fully to the sunshine and the breeze. It will not accomplish our object, if we remove the forest and the undergrowth, and suffer a crop of weeds, or even grass, to take their place, and as completely exclude the sun and air from direct access to the earth. We deem it a great error that many fall into, in attempting to dry swamp lands, that they put them in meadow, and thus cover them for at least half the summer from the sunshine by such a dense coat of grass as only this quality of soil is capable of producing.

If swamp lands are timbered, the first consideration is to remove the shade. Then secure a full exposure of the surface to the evaporating influences. This is most economically accomplished by close pasturage with cattle and sheep. It is an observation in almost everybody's mouth, that "tramping the land dries it." The mistake in this is, that while the treading of the stock has little or no effect in producing the result, the close pasturing and consequent bare exposure of the earth to the sunshine, &c., has, by evaporation, carried off the redundant moisture, and the land which of late was a swamp has become dry. We will properly appreciate the importance of evaporation in drying swamp lands, when we remember that all the water that falls on the surface of the territory drained by the Mississippi river, but about one-sixteenth part, finds its way to the Gulf of Mexico through the channel of that stream.

The remaining fifteen-sixteenths, is taken up by the atmosphere again, through the process of evaporation. In drying land by drainage, we can witness the process with our eyes—we can see the water passing off in our ditches, but evaporation does its work silently and invisibly. Hence it is that its importance is so often underrated, if not wholly overlooked. But we have said, and it is capable of demonstration, that its influence in drying the soil is, to that of drainage, as fifteen to one. To remove the obstacles that obstruct the natural surface drains and to expose the earth to a free evaporation, is frequently all that is necessary to make the first quality of land out of that which in its natural state, was deemed utterly worthless. In those lands, however, that are rendered swampy by springs, or streams proceeding from higher grounds, and losing their channels in the valleys, open ditches of sufficient capacity to carry off all the water in time of freshets will be necessary. These when once made, will, in most instances, become the permanent channels of streams, and will, with but little attention, keep themselves open.

Large wet prairies often skirt the margin of our western streams, which our farmers regard as waste lands—utterly irreclaimable. And it is frequently true, that notwithstanding the most perfect surface, evaporation is obtained, and a thorough system of parallel ditching is adopted, yet they stubbornly remain marshes, too wet for any useful purpose. In these instances we will almost invariably find the source of all the trouble in springs that break out from the hills in the rear, and enter the marsh a few feet below its surface. A ditch at the foot of the hill, and running parallel with it, of sufficient depth to reach the "hard pan," on which the reservoir of spring water rests, and of such dimensions as to carry off all the water afforded by the springs, together with that which will descend from the hill in time of heavy rains, will most effectually dry the worst marshes of this description.

I have observed several instances of accidental drainage of this character along the Wabash and Erie canal. Between the town of Bloomington and the Wabash river, was formerly a wet prairie of the most hopeless character. The canal was excavated at the foot of the bluff on which the town is situated. In the excavation a fountain of water was cut extending several rods along the line of the canal and discharging a copious stream.

The result was, that the marsh beyond in a short time became dry land, adding much to the convenience and health of the town.

The same is true of a most unpromising marsh in the south-western part of the city of Lafayette, where the cut for the track of the New Albany and Salem railroad serves the purposes of a drainage ditch. But the larger proportion of the wet lands of Indiana are not of this class. They are the summit lands, lying along the line of water shed between the principal streams, and occupying the most elevated positions in the state. The water on this class of lands is almost invariably surface water, held up from percolation downward by a subsoil of blue clay, entirely impervious to water, and excluded from evaporation by dense forests, or a heavy coat of tall grass, while the drainage is obstructed by fallen timber, decaying grass of last year's crop, &c. When these obstacles are removed, as we have indicated above, if the soil yet remains too wet for profitable cropping, then recourse must be had to underground drainage by means of covered ditches. I prefer a covered to an open ditch, because it effects the drainage as perfectly, if not more so, and is less liable to become obstructed, while it is not in the way of cultivation by plow, harrow or drill. Moreover, we may effect a more perfect drainage by multiplying our ditches, or rather, by adopting a regular system of ditches; making a main trunk following the line of lowest depression in the piece of land to be drained, and extending from its lateral branches on either side, sufficiently close to each other to dry effectually the surface between them.

In constructing under drains, several methods have been adopted. In Scotland, I have learned from a well informed native of that country, covered ditches are extensively employed in the most highly cultivated districts of the "low lands." These are made by first opening a ditch from twenty inches to three feet deep, and then filling it from ten to twenty inches with loose stones. Over this is placed a covering of sod, over which the loose earth is thrown until the ditch is filled. This method could be used with economy in but a small portion of the state—the swamp lands generally lying remote from stone. A method that has been very extensively used in various portions of the west, is as follows: A ditch is made about twenty inches deep and twelve or fourteen inches wide, with neatly trimmed perpendicular banks; split timber resembling barrel heading, eighteen inches long and about one-fourth of an inch thick, is placed on end in one corner of the bottom of the ditch, and leaned against the opposite bank—thus covering a triangular space through which the surface water may freely escape. In a solid clay sub-soil, this method answers the purpose well; but in wet prairie and in much of the “black burr oak land,” the bank will become too soft to support the weight of the earth filling the ditch, and will give way and suffer the boards to fall upon the bottom of the ditch, and thus obstruct the drainage. A drain that will cost a trifle more than this, and is every way more permanent, is made by placing timbers about six inches wide and three inches thick, against each side of a perpendicular ditch eighteen inches wide. These are then covered with boards, as used in the former case, and the ditch filled to the level as before, or one of the side timbers might be used without serious injury. In surveying a piece of land that is proposed to be drained, the farmer should avail himself of the earliest hour after a heavy rain, and observe the natural position and direction of the currents of water, and mark out his ditches accordingly. A main ditch or leader, may require to be much larger than we have indicated. The size, however, should always be proportioned to the area of surface to be drained.

If minks, muskrats, and other burrowing animals are likely to be troublesome about the ditches, (which is frequently the case,) all that is necessary to prevent their depredations is to fill the mouth of the ditch with stone, after the Scotch method.

In swamp lands reclaimed by under drainage, when a growing crop is on the ground, the position of the concealed ditches may be distinctly traced by the more vigorous growth of vegetation in their immediate vicinity. I have heard this phenomenon referred wholly to the influence of the air admitted from beneath and permitted to circulate freely through the porous soil above. It would perhaps be wrong to deny that this cause has some influence in producing the result noticed; for this quality of soil is generally rich in humus, much of which would be rendered soluble by a free access to the oxygen of the air, which would otherwise remain insoluble, and consequently exert no influence on the growing crop. But we regard the result mainly referable to other and more obvious causes.

The surface water to be carried off by the ditch, holds in suspension or imperfect solution, much of the finer and richer portion of the soil.

The loose earth above the ditch operates as a strainer, and arrests this in its passage downwards, thus greatly enriching grounds adjacent to the ditch.

Add to this the fact, that a portion of the sub-soil becomes mixed with the surface mould in the operation of making and filling the ditch.

In wet prairies, and in the “black swamps” of the timbered land, this is an important consideration; for one of the principal defects of these soils is the deficiency of clay and sand, which will be supplied by mixing the sub-soil with the surface mould. To these causes jointly, we would attribute the more luxuriant growth of vegetation in the immediate neighborhood of under drains. The observing farmer will readily perceive the advantage of using under drains in preference to open ditches, in point of economy.

All the finer particles of soil held in suspension would be carried off by an open ditch, while it would be retained if we substitute a covered one.

There remains to be noticed a third means of disposing of surface water, to wit: absorption. Every one has observed that in a compact soil unplowed, every small shower, if not carried off by surface drainage, will stand in puddles until evaporated. Now, if this same soil, to the depth of six or eight inches, had been rendered mellow by repeated stirring and cultivation, it would have absorbed even a heavy rain without leaving any surface water visible. We therefore write down deep plowing—sub-soil plowing, if you please—as an important auxiliary in drying swamp lands. Ten inches of loose surface soil, in but a moderate state of dryness, will absorb two inches of water over its entire surface, and this would be a very heavy summer rain.

To secure the most perfect absorption, the soil stirred by the plow, should be rendered perfectly mellow, which is a condition in many clay sub-soils not very easily obtained.

In this quality of lands, the mellowing process will be much facilitated by the addition of lime or some other alkaline dressing.

A faithful and persevering adherence to these means, will not fail to render tillable almost any specimen of swamp lands.

There may be ponds and deep marshes, which, from the peculiarity of their situation, cannot be drained; but extensive observation has convinced me that those instances are much less common than most persons suppose.

Indiana enjoys a more perfect summit drainage than either of the neighboring states, lying like her, between the lakes and the Ohio river. There is a peculiarity about the Wabash river, that challenges our admiration of the wisdom displayed in its adaptation to the purposes of summit drainage. If we trace the Wabash from its mouth upwards, we shall find its general direction north a few points east, until we reach a position nearly equi-distant between the lake and the Ohio. It then sweeps a curve to the east, and traverses a summit for more than one hundred miles in a direction nearly at right angles with its lower course.

The same tendency to an east and west direction is observed in its larger tributaries, as White river, Tippecanoe, Eel river, &c.

This arrangement supplies the summit lands of Indiana with a well distributed system of running streams, which will greatly facilitate the artificial drainage where it shall be deemed necessary."

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTIONS.

Enough has already been said of the climate and soil of Indiana, to show conclusively, that her capacity to produce with an efficient system of agriculture, can not be excelled by any of her sister states. It only remains for the farmers of Indiana to improve the advantages spread in profusion around them, and great must be their reward. We have not the means at hand for giving the exact amounts of the different products of 1858. The following figures, however, may be considered approximates, which show that the amounts far exceed those of former years:

Last year there was grown:

	Bushels.		Bushels.
Wheat,.....	9,350,975.	Rye,.....	183,060.
Corn,.....	39,833,366.	Barley,.....	6,774
Oats,.....	4,621,800.	Hay, (tons).....	342,118.

From the above figures, it will be seen that the products of the state, considering the amount of tillable land, equal if not excel any of the neighboring states. Indiana is well adapted to the raising of swine, which being chiefly fattened on corn, commands a ready market at prices that afford a handsome profit.

As yet the proper attention has not been bestowed upon fruit raising, although there are many fine varieties which have been cultivated with satisfactory results. The mountain ranges or river hills, whose tops are well adapted to the successful cultivation of the peach, are still revelling in the habilaments with which nature first clothed them, while the valleys beneath are only capable of insuring an average crop about once in three years.

Hay, as an article of commerce in the southern part of the state, is quite an important item, many thousand tons annually, (being pressed and baled in convenient form and size,) are shipped to New Orleans and intermediate ports with highly remunerative results.

The timbered ergions of Indiana are inexhaustible. Her forests abound in all the varieties of trees natural to the soil and climate. Near the rivers are found an abundance of the best of timber for boat or ship building purposes, which of late years, has been an important branch of her productive industry. Water privileges are abundant almost every where, many of which are unimproved, inviting the mechanic and capitalist to develop them.

MINERAL RESOURCES.

The mineral resources of Indiana are yet comparatively undeveloped. Certain scientific surveys have, however, established the fact that her coal fields are not only extensive but inexhaustible. Mines of iron ore are also found of an extraordinary quality, requiring but capital and organization to work them with profit, and at the same time develop her latent wealth, which at no distant period will be the pride and boast of the state;

MANUFACTURES.

The manufactures and trade of the State are specially noted in the preceding descriptions of the cities and towns where they are carried on.

Many of the towns on the Ohio river, possess superior advantages for manufacturing. In fact the entire state possesses natural advantages and facilities, which when properly improved, would render her manufactories infinitely more profitable than would be the exportation of the raw material. Capitalists seem to have become aware of this fact within the past few years, as is evinced in the establishment of many important manufactories; among which may be noticed an extensive Rolling Mill for the manufacture of railroad and other iron, built at a cost of $125,000. It has the capacity of turning out 14,000 tons of new iron annually, and of consuming about the same amount of coal.

Car wheels, edge tools, saws, &c., are manufactured in the state. Also wagons, carriages, and agricultural implements are important features in the productive industry of Indiana. The manufacture of cooperage, probably exceeds that of any other state in the union.

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS.

The State of Indiana has 540 miles of Canal; much of which at the present time, is wholly unprofitable as a means of transportation or any other purpose except as a general water power. The complete net-work of Railroads that now traverse the State, renders all other modes of transportation inefficient and unprofitable. The amount of Railroads in successful operation within the State, will not vary much from 3,000 miles; and running as they do through eighty counties out of the ninety-one, which constitute the State, afford facilities for travel and transportation unequalled by any other state in the union.

INSTITUTIONS.

The State Prison, situated at Jeffersonville, Clark county, within sight of the Falls of the Ohio, is an institution of growing importance to the State. Some time in the year of 1848, when the population was but a trifle over 892,000, there were confined in the prison 140 convicts. During the summer of 1858, ten years later, when the population is not quite doubled, we find the convicts more than tripled. In the report of the Directors to the Governor, we find the following:

"No more buildings can be erected within the present walls of the Prison, and leave the necessary space for light and ventilation, and conveying materials into, and manufactured articles out of the yard. At the earliest practicable period, the State will be compelled, either to greatly enlarge the present Prison, or erect a new one entire. Perhaps convenience and economy would require the new Prison to be located in the north part of the State."

The same report exhibits a balance of assets over liabilities for the year ending December 15th, 1857, of $4,319 88.

The Indiana Hospital for the Insane, the Indiana Institute for the Education of the Blind, and the Institution for Educating the Deaf and Dumb, are fine buildings, and well arranged for the several purposes for which they were intended; but the neglect of the Legislature of 1857, to make certain proper appropriations, has left them in a condition best shown by their several reports made to the Governor for the year aforesaid.

The Indiana University, situated at Bloomington, is a State Institution, and since the organization of the Government, has received the support of the public treasury. It is open to persons of every sect of religion, and hence it must steadily advance in prosperity and usefulness. The North-Western Christian University, situated at Indianapolis, and the Indiana Asbury University, at Greencastle, are institutions of much promise, and are under the management of competent professors; for a more extended notice of which, the reader is referred to the statistical matter of the towns where they are located.

There are also located in the State several fine Colleges, Academies and Seminaries; among which are, the Wabash College, at Crawfordsville; the Thorntown Academy, at Thorntown; the Central Medical College of Indiana; the Franklin College; the Brookville College; the Danville College; the Moore's Hill Female Seminary; the St. Gabriel's College, at Vincennes, and the University of Notre Dame Du Lac, (Catholic institutions,); the Friends Boarding School, etc., all of which stand high as seats of learning.

The Roman Catholics have a flourishing Theological Seminary at Vincennes; and the Indiana Theological Seminary at Hanover, and the New Albany Female Seminary, under the charge of competent instructors.

PRINCIPAL CITIES.

Indianapolis, the largest city in the State, is the seat of government. It is situated on the west fork of White river, and near the geographical center of the State, in latitude 39° 55' north, and longitude 86° 05' west from Washington. It is the great Railroad city of the West, and contains a population of 28,900.

The other principal places, with their population, manufactures and general resources, will be found under their proper heads, in the body of the work. The population of the State, taking the census of 1850, as a basis, and adding five per cent. per annum, is about 1,400,000.

HISTORY.

"Indiana originally constituted a great part of New France, and from 1683, to 1763, when the country was ceded to England, various trading posts had been established. Vincennes had become a flourishing town. On the 7th of May, 1800, Ohio having been organized into a separate Territory, the remainder of the Territory north-west of the Ohio river, was named Indiana Territory, with a distinct organization. From this Territory were subsequently formed in 1805, the Michigan, and in 1809, the Illinois Territory. From 1788, to 1814, the settlements were much engaged in hostilities with the Indians. In 1815, the Territorial Legislature petitioned Congress for admission into the union; and on the 19th of April, 1816, a bill passed Congress enabling the people to form a Constitution and State government. A Convention for this purpose was held in June, and Indiana was admitted into the union by a resolution of Congress of the 11th December, of the same year. The French from Canada, were the first white men that invaded the wilderness of Indiana. The northern part of the State, as at present bounded, was visited by Lassalle and Father Hennepin, in 1690; and soon after, mission stations and trading posts, were established on the banks of the Wabash. Little is known of the history of these; but it is on record, that the river here named, was used by the French as one of the thoroughfares between their possessions in Canada and those of Louisiana.

The downfall of Quebec, sealed also the fate of the posts on the Wabash; and by the treaty of 1763, the whole country east of the Mississippi, was ceded to England, and after the struggle of the revolution, it became a part of the United States of America."

CONCLUSION.

In the foregoing, we have only aimed to give a general outline, leaving the reader to peruse the details, which he will find in the body of the work. Did time and space permit, it would be a pleasing task to lift the veil and speculate upon the future greatness of the Hoosier State; but relying upon the intelligence and industry of the citizens for her future development, we will leave the subject.

INDIANA CENTRAL RAILWAY.

The Indiana Central Railway proper, is 72½ miles long, extending from Indianapolis to the State line, dividing Indiana and Ohio near New Paris, in the latter State, and connecting at the State line with the Dayton and Western Railroad, extending to Dayton, Ohio, making the distance between Indianapolis and Dayton 103 miles. The line is nearly a straight one, having less than four miles of curvature in Indiana, and runs nearly east and west, and nearly throughout its whole length within fifty rods of the old National Road, and through the very best improved portion of the State, in the counties of Marion, Hancock, Henry and Wayne; and at once place the line runs for a distance of about six miles on the line dividing the counties of Rush, on one side, and Hancock and Henry on the other.

At Richmond the line connects with the Cincinnati, Hamilton, Eaton and Richmond Railroad, affording an outlet to Cincinnati through an old settled, highly improved, and among the most fertile valleys in Ohio.

The lines through to Dayton and Cincinnati are very substantially constructed, well ballasted, smooth and comfortable to travel over, and the succession of broad, fertile fields, neat farm-houses, and other rural improvements, prosperous towns and cities, with large manufacturing establishments, render this route the most attractive of any in the State. The through business in passengers and freight is large and increasing; and the local business, owing to the fertility of the soil, high state of improvements, and dense rural, village and city population, is the best in the State.

MICHIGAN CENTRAL RAILROAD.

The Michigan Central Railroad, extending from Detroit to Chicago, forms one of the great connecting links of communication between the east and the west. It connects at Detroit with the Great Western (Canada) Railway; and this, with New York Central and the New York and Erie Railroad at Niagara Falls, makes it one of our great thoroughfares to the Atlantic seaboard. The wire suspension bridge at Niagara Falls is one of the greatest triumphs of engineering; indeed, it is in reality one of the wonders of the world. At Hamilton, Canada, the Great Western connects with the Grand Trunk Railway, giving a direct railway communication with Toronto, Montreal, Quebec, and Portland, in the State of Maine. The Michigan Central also connects with the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad; at Michigan City with the New Albany and Salem Railroad; at Calumet with the Illinois Central Railroad; and at Chicago with all roads running to Milwaukee, Madison, Galena, Dubuque, Rock Island, Davenport, Iowa City, Quincy, St. Louis, Cairo, and all places west, northwest, and southwest. It has a branch, commencing at Lake, (45 miles southeast of Chicago,) and running to Joliet, where it connects with the Alton and St. Louis Railroad.

Butler's Mercantile, Record, and Copying EXCELSIOR FLUID INKS, Manufactured by

JAMES J. BUTLER, Agent,

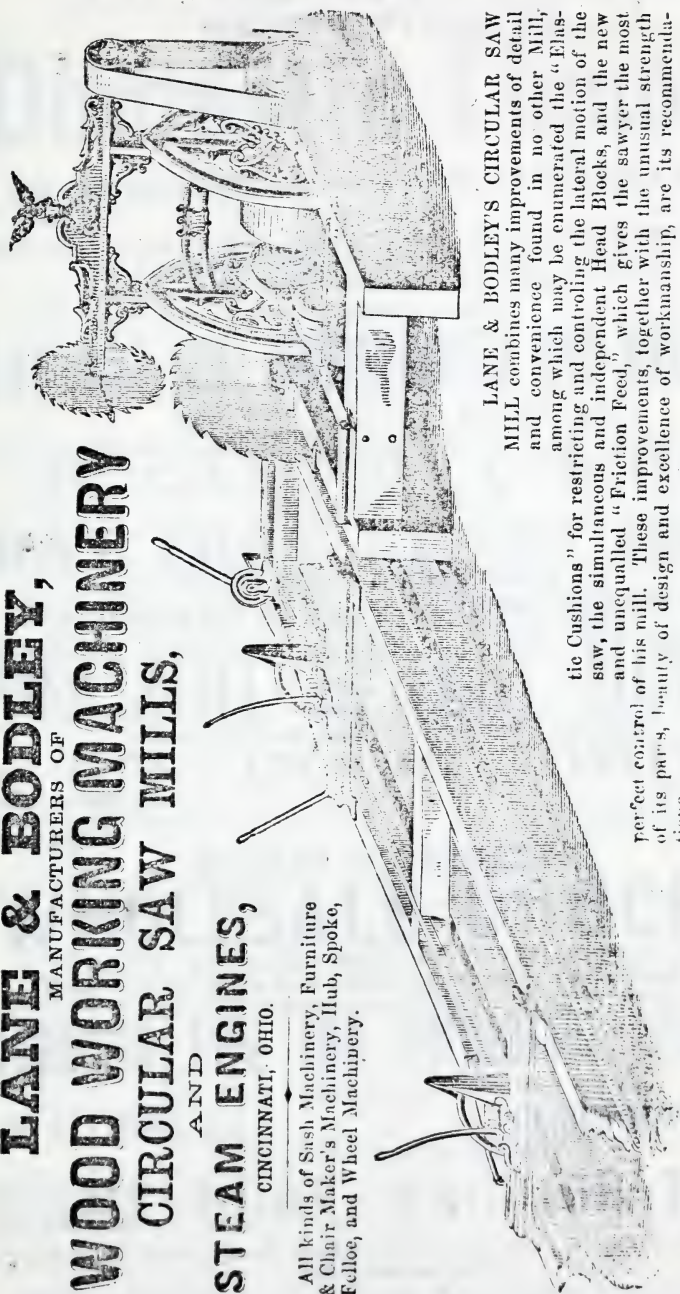

No. 39 Vine St., 2 1-2 Squares South of Burnet House, Cincinnati, O.

I make three distinct varieties, differing one from the other only in their degree of fluidity, and designated by the label: Record, for Ledgers and Records only; Mercantile, for Books, Letters and general purposes; Copying, for Letter Press only. These fluids change from a greenish blue to a deep and permanent black color, which no length of time will fade or destroy. These fluid inks were first offered to the public in 1854, since which time there has been awarded them eighteen Diplomas, three Bronze and one Silver Medal. An enumeration of them is deemed unnecessary, as they may be seen at my office. They are largely used in the prominent cities and towns of the west and south, and to some extent in eastern cities.

Southgate House

On South-east Corner of Sixth and Elm Streets, CINCINNATI, O.

THIS LARGE, COMMODIOUS AND CENTRAL HOTEL

Has been leased for a term of years by the subscriber, and having been closed for repairs, has undergone a thorough renovation, and is now re-opened for the accommodation of the traveling public.

This House, situated on high ground, is the best ventilated of any in the city. It is six stories high, built of stone, and capable of accommodating comfortably 150 persons, mostly with separate apartments. The doors are fastened with the celebrated anti-burglar locks, making it impossible for the door to be opened on the outside, while locked within. It presents the advantage of being located convenient to the Custom House, Post Office, and Pearl Street, now the greatest Wholesale Street in the city, as well as but a short distance from the Theatres and other places of amusement.

The apartments are clean and well kept, good order will always be strictly observed, and servants will be polite and attentive. From the Proprietor's long experience in the business, he is confident the house shall be so conducted, as to meet the patronage of the public, and to make it the best

DOLLAR A DAY HOUSE IN THE CITY.

The House will be kept open night and day, at all hours. Omnibuses will be in attendance to and from the cars. Breakfast for early train.

Board,$1.00 per Day.

Having experimented with medicine in the treatment of disease, for more than ten years, laying aside all prejudices, I have examined in the meantime, all the various systems and schools of medicine, and have selected such remedies as I could demonstrate to be safe and efficient, rejecting all mineral poisons. To remove acute diseases is comparatively an easy task; it is the curing of chronic disease that requires science, positive science, combined with patience and perseverance, tempered with kindness. It is in the latter class of diseases where physicians mostly make their failures; indeed, they more frequently aggravate rather than benefit. Having given this class of disease my special attention, I profess to be prepared to treat all Chronic Diseases with positive success. I mean all that are curable cases, unless it be conditionally, so that patients may depend on my declaration.

I profess to treat successfully all Chronic Diseases of the Lungs, Liver Complaint, Bronchia, Deafness, Diseases of the Eye in all its forms, Neuralgia, Paralysis, Rheumatism, and all derangement of the nervous system, Fistula in Ano, Piles and Prolapsus. And successfully treated in from thirty to sixty days, without the use of the knife, nor much additional pain.

I profess to treat with unparalleled success the loathsome disease known by the name of Cancer, in all its stages, without the use of the knife, nor any harsh treatment. Furthermore, as regards this loathsome disease, I will forfeit $500 for any one case I will undertake, if a failure accrue under my treatment from this date.

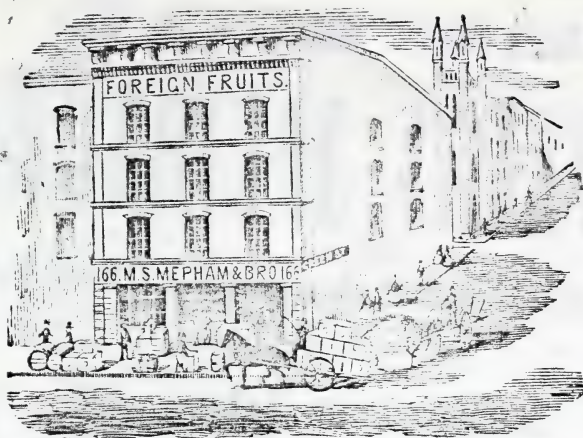

I might enumerate the whole class of Chronic diseases, but it is sufficient to say that I feel myself equal to all cases that are curable; all other cases I shall positively decline treating, except conditionally.

Letters from a distance, containing one stamp, will receive prompt attention.

Address Box 1980.
